Yeah. Why I wasted my time reading it...

Sigh.

You should have talked to a lawyer.

I was severely disabled with ptsd and I was under an ongoing criminal massacre. This victimization that people don't think happened caused me severe PTSD. I needed the Justice Departments help. My SOL still isn't up.

Yeah. I read that in your diatribe.

If it was me, I would have hired a lawyer to put together my compliant.

You seem to have:

Included too little criminal law complaint.

Included too little evidence.

Included too much information that gave Wells Fargo an out.

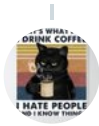

Bad format

Let me give you some unsolicited advice. When you google your name this problem of yours comes up. Fine. It's important in your personal life, ok.

But it also shows up in your professional & consulting stuff.

If you are trying to do computer consulting clean personal stuff out.

I listened to you and Shirley a lot.

That's enough.

I think you are wrong about what she was trying to do.

When you talked had you already lost your health insurance from Wells Fargo?

I want you to know that I have spent more time with your odd cause than anyone should have to.

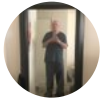

Your big problem isn't your manic depression, it's that you misread reality.

You know what's annoying?

You clicking through endless facebook searches while the calls play, that's annoying.

I'm in that phase where I call you a liar. I will cash app you or PayPal you $50 if you can show proof that you clicked the mobile-crisis-analysis link. You will have to show the folder that you downloaded to on you phone or computer, with a timestamp of before today.

Yes, I will immediately give an obsessive possibly autistic computer expert with self-described mental health issues data on my financials and my computer info. That seems like a super good idea.

You have no case. You sent this all to six? seven? eight? government agencies.

Nothing happened.

Ipso facto, no case.
