More evidence

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>

I forgot to mention in this last email- please abstain from immediately forwarding what I send you to the various criminals referenced in my complaint. This causes enormous problems for me, as I explain in the attachments to the last email.

These are calls that I did not know that I had for a long time. They are with Jenny, the pitiful woman that Wells Fargo hides behind. She later told me that following calls like this she cries herself to sleep.

I have recently become conscious of just what I stand in the middle of with this bank. I do not want to cause any harm that would hurt them excessively and I certainly do not want to do anything that harms the economy.

With that said, if they are to get away with it all, I would like to win somehow. Whether or not I am allowed to win, if they get away with it all, I will not let them also get away with calling me a liar.

I have no idea what they tell you, but if it diverges at all from what I have said it is dead wrong. In the attached calls, you will find yet more examples of my asking for the truth consequence free.

If I had a record of every call I made and every text I have sent, the total of such attempts would be at least in the dozens.

I have also attached the call with Jenny that took place on April 16th. This is one day before the mobile crisis counselors came to visit me, after which they wrote up a fake report that I was having an "active psychosis". Notice how I do not appear to have any such problems on the day before this scam was run. In the 04/16/2020 call note that I stutter due to cognitive impairment from my medications.
