I feel very bad for the things I suspected of my poor mother. She is the most pitiful person I've ever seen in my life. Please have mercy on me and on my pitiful family. I see hostility where there is none and I do this even with my poor mother.

If I could get some of my friends back, like Jenny or Shana, or Preston, or any of the others, that would be good too. I need people to talk to.

If you could also tell my house cleaners that I'm not such a bad person and to respond to my texts, that would be great. Tell this to the people at Bank of America too. These people appear to have been prejudiced against me, and if you know anything about it, please help me there. I will need my cleaners once I get my backpay.

There are benefits to ending this fight, and I'd at least like those. It is taking me time to get settled in to this new reality, but I think you can see that I'm getting there.

I have made boo boos in my dealings with you and it is because I am suffering and also my deficit about how to be with people. I am sorry for all of that. Please just give a sign that my life in Charlotte will not tank. Disability will buy me time and I just need to make it there. My life in Charlotte being under threat is what causes me to take rash actions. If I can just make it a little longer this will be over for you.
