Wells Fargo wants a court trial?

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

I get the idea that Wells Fargo wants a lawsuit. To me this is unfair because you have sponsored a cover up that has rigged the game in Wells Fargo's favor. If this is how I get help, I will do it however. I would need Wells Fargo to go behind the scenes and get someone who will represent me. When I contact these law firms, I get discriminated against every time. I will never be able to get one to represent me.

If it would somehow serve Wells Fargo's interest for this to go to court, they need to get me a lawyer. I have contacted many in Charlotte. Morgan & Morgan, crumbley, Gilman or something like that (Gibson maybe), I can't remember the rest. They can get one of these to email me or call me back that they will help me. Then we can go on with the formality of the court process.
