You don't realize how dire this situation is. You need to wake up. When you ignore reality, reality doesn't care that it is being ignored. It continues to pound right on, being the reality that it is. There comes a point that reality will no longer let you ignore it. At that point, you will wish that you could go back. You can go back now. You are in the present moment where you can change the course for the better. Please help me there is no more than I can take.
