Re: Why are you not helping me?

One thing that I looked forward to, when I got some money from this, was to make it right with this poor girl from my childhood. I wanted to tell her that this was for her, that she deserves it, that people don't treat her like that and she gets nothing for it.

I wanted to tell her that she is someone who deserves to be treated with kindness, to have her wishes respected, and to be respected and treated as someone whose thoughts and feelings matter. I wanted to tell her that I'm sorry for any and every time that I have treated her any different, and that I'm sorry for all the other people who don't care to say that they're sorry. I want to make it right for me, but to also be in a position to make it right for all the rest of them, who don't care to say that they're sorry.

I'm going to die and those are a good candidate for my last words to her. I kills me, the thought that my fight will be lost and I will never be able to make it right with her.

I need you to please help me. I could have a good life if you will help me. I could have a life where I get some enjoyment out of things. I could have things turn out well for me.

Without your help, my life is hopeless and I will die.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
