I am not fit to live with people

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

I have told you over and over how I am not fit to live with people. This is not going to turn out well. When Wells Fargo does this to me and then doesn't want to be a part of the solution, Wells Fargo leaves a gap that is too big for anyone else to fill it.

You want to ignore this problem like it never happened. The problem is that it did happen. It is the reality and reality doesn't care that it's being ignored. It keeps on being reality. This situation is going to blow up in someone's face, quite possibly yours. I am far from ok. It will not end well in any circumstance, not unless I get something out of my fight for justice. If I had money for my own place, I wouldn't have the problem that I have now.

My mother doesn't know it, and she can't tell, but my PTSD is causing me to have a feeling like I want to murder her, and I'm having to hold back and be very careful. If we get in an argument I'm going to lose control.
