This is not going anywhere

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

When Wells Fargo doesn't want to help me and refuses to be a part of the solution, Wells Fargo leaves a gap that is too big for anyone else to fill. It is extremely dangerous for my mother to live here with me. It is dangerous for anyone to live with me. This PTSD has caused me to have incredible hostility. Wells Fargo did this to me. Their abuse and their crime spree have caused me to be a ruined human being. I am broken. My wires are faulty. There are sparks flying out of my head. That's what I mean when I say ruined. Take a machine, say some kind of robot, and beat the hell out of it until it won't work and just goes berserk. That's the condition I am in. I am not fit to be around people.

Time will tell. This won't last forever. Something will come of this after I have warned you 1,000 times. The fact that it is against the rules for this bank to pay the consequences of its actions doesn't change the reality that its actions have consequences. You do not massacre someone so extremely and then have everything be just fine like it never happened. You need this reality to go away, and reality doesn't care. Reality isn't going anywhere.
