

Leonard Clinton Williams III [REDACTED]@gmail.com>

Oct 10th, 2022, 6:13 PM

Here are some more people for Wells Fargo to kidnap

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

I almost certainly have heart disease. I will find out, most likely, within the next 2 or 3 weeks. I am extremely tired most of the time, and I spend a lot of time on twitter.

Here is an excerpt on a discussion about what mentally ill people (specifically those who are in a manic episode or who are in a psychosis, both of which apply to me when I was in the hospital at age 18) will say when they have symptoms.

Maybe Wells Fargo can use its enormous network to track down and find the people referenced in these tweets. Wells Fargo can victimize them with impunity, illegally obtain their healthcare records, and show them to the bigots at the United States Department of Justice and the bigots at the Federal Reserve.

You can then run a cover up and terrorize these innocent and powerless people.

This is because, apparently, in the US DOJ's mind, the only thing worse than committing millions of felonies against innocent people (as Wells Fargo has done) is having a harmless mental illness (as I do).

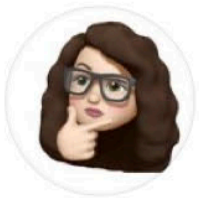

My harmless condition of being (that I did not and could not choose) ruins any chances I had with you, while no amount of sickening criminal behavior on the part of Wells Fargo will ever cause them to lose a drop of untouchable holiness in your eyes.

You people need to stick to law enforcement and keep your bigoted eyes and ears out of people's private healthcare matters. Maybe you could DM the professionals making these tweets and ask to learn something from them. They are likely not that different than the 6 or 12 professionals at the hospital I was at, who (very much correctly) determined that I was a harmless person who got ill, and that it would be fine for me to go home.

5:58 ↗

Tweet

SaltyMD

@RealityDiplomat

Replying to @passthepeace and @lindyli

Precisely. I, too, worked on locked units with the most severely mentally ill. The experience abounds. But I'll never forget one of my clinic patients - whenever she was becoming ill again, her first symptom was spewing racism. Once treated, she was the sweetest, quietest person

10:46 AM · 10/10/22 · Twitter for iPhone

4 Likes

bo cau, phd 🐦 @passthepeace · 7h

Replying to @RealityDiplomat and @lindyli

yes, we all forget that every single one of us has the capacity to be “good” AND to bring harm. it’s a healthy and regulated mind that dictates which parts of us is shown to the world.

Tweet your reply

5:58 ↵

bo cau, phd 🐦
@passthepeace

Replying to @RealityDiplomat and @lindyli

i agree with this 100 . as a psychologist who has worked in locked units, i have observe manic and psychotic pts say some of the most foulest things i have ever heard, but after 7 days of being properly treated they can be a completely different person.

10:36 AM · 10/10/22 · Twitter for iPhone

2 Retweets 9 Likes

SaltyMD @RealityDiplomat · 7h

Replying to @passthepeace and @lindyli

Precisely. I, too, worked on locked units with the most severely mentally ill. The experience abounds. But I'll never forget one of my clinic patients - whenever she was becoming ill again, her first symptom was spewing racism. Once treated, she was the sweetest, quietest person

1

4

Tweet your reply

--

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams

(980)-

