Re: I'm sorry

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

This has gotten out of hand. I'm very unwell and not in control of myself. I had some strength a month or 2 ago. I felt like I had some fight in me. That's why I upped my offer to something closer to fair to me. That strength was fleeting and I'm extremely bad off. My life is over and there is nothing I could get that would make me happy, I don't think. If this gets in the media, I'm going to be destroyed by it. I will happily accept the destruction, in lieu of the nightmare that I'm currently living. I need very badly to move to another country. That is one use for this large sum of money I am asking for. I hope to be able to bribe a foreign government to give me citizenship.

I am focused on this situation almost all of the time. It is because I live in torment and fear the future. I act as if I'm solely focused on some sort of immediate relief, and that's because I am. This is not rational but I cannot help it. I don't think too far ahead, in a way, and I don't have much of a strategy. I ask you for help because that advances my cause (possibly) and then I go and talk shit about you for being criminals, because that advances my cause. I do whatever I feel like advances my cause (and I do this almost compulsively, would probably be an accurate description) and there isn't much rhyme or reason outside of that. You do not realize what you've done to me. I am a massacred human being.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
