I'm still liking my chances of getting this in the media. I feel the need to remind you that my facts are the game winners. Anyone who deviates from my version of what has occurred and the resulting outcome is dead wrong. For this there will be few or no exceptions. There are some inaccurate things in my complaint, while we're on that note. I wasn't near finished with that when I submitted it. I'm very tired and don't feel like listing them here. It's all pointless, because you know what has really occurred.

I am not sure if you are in talks with anyone in the mountains. If you are the prime (and really the only) suspect is Chris from the pool hall. Everything I've said about him is true and he is the farthest thing from an unbiased source. He wants me dead, over extremely irrational grievances.

One possibility I have contemplated is that I end up dying and after the fact you charge him for interfering with an investigation. If you are talking with him, what he says about me is not true. That would count as obstructing the process. Once I die, people will be popping out of the woodwork to vet my version of the facts. This is concerning him and concerning everyone else in this narrative. It will be a nonstop chorus of people saying that things are exactly as I describe them. This will be accompanied by the same people having huge insights into me and the kind of person that I am. I have been a tough nut to crack for a very long time, but I've got myself sufficiently figured out at this point. When I explain the full story to others, it will all make perfect sense.

You may be wondering where this story will come from. I'm going to write a book about my life and about being murdered by Wells Fargo, the United States of America, and the various entities that Wells Fargo induced into criminal behavior. You have murdered me in the cruelest way imaginable. You have subjected me to the kind of murder in which the victim survives. I am left to live on as this murdered, massacred human being, feeling this crushing pain every day.

I am going to write my book so that if I die, it will be left here to defend me. I also have plans to make some extremely thorough and detailed audios and videos, to be played if I die. The purpose of the videos and audios will be to fight Wells Fargo from the grave. I am so keen on anticipating your next moves that I don't need to wait for them to happen. I fight this fight alone. I am so surrounded that even my own mother participates in this. I will continue to fight this fight alone after I am dead.

Clint Williams
