

Leonard Clinton Williams III [REDACTED]@gmail.com>

Dec 2nd, 2022, 1:00 PM

More audios on the way

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

I'm making you some audios on my new computer. It's such a beast and it opens up new possibilities for my fight against Wells Fargo. I made about 5 audios this morning, starting at about 6:45 am. I had to quit on number 6. I got too tired. I'm going to pick up and finish number 6 tomorrow. Then I have more to make. They're kind of long. Ranging from maybe 14 minutes to maybe 18 minutes a pop.

I suffer like hell. It is constant torment. I do not like living and I'm not sure that I ever will. I had a sort of good time making these audios. I need at least $3 billion to make life even remotely worth living. I will take less if I end up with no other option. $3 billion is pennies on the dollar.

I am writing a book. It will detail my hard lived life and my being cruelly murdered by Wells Fargo and the United States of America. And that's what you've done. You have cruelly murdered a kindhearted man for no reason. The story that I tell will scream of heartless, cruel murder, and the story that I tell will be the complete truth.

I have suffered the kind of murder that you survive. It is the worst kind of murder. You have murdered my soul. When you are exposed for murdering my soul, you will face consequences. Not everyone is as cruel as you. If I go you will go with me. This bank will have to begin the process of winding down, to close its doors for the last time.

I don't mean to be pedantic or to take on a holy than thou art attitude, but it is a terrible mistake to not listen to me and to not take everything I say as the complete truth. I think it can be easy to think less of me. I have self-control problems, and this is kind of obvious in my behavior. I may not seem too competent because of this and other things. You also may have been influenced to see me as some sort of dishonest person. This is another terrible mistake. Everything is exactly as I say that it is. I'm trying to save you and I'm trying to save me.

It may sound insane to you for me to ask for billions of dollars. This is not at all unreasonable and if I had a group of experts to opine they would unanimously agree, and they would also agree that this is pennies on the dollar.

At any and all times where you do not see things as I describe them, you need to find out why. You need to question yourself or look at this from another angle. Reaching out to me is the best solution. I am a decimated human being and am likely to scream and cry on the phone.

My healthcare records are not going to get you anywhere. I keep coming back to those because I feel like they have prejudiced you. I have sent you an explanation of those. What may also need to be mentioned is that my behavior during that hospital stay was not atypical for someone having a mental breakdown (for which the technical term is psychosis). My childhood had a role in how my symptoms manifested, but I am far from the only one to say disturbing and extreme stuff. It is very typical.

If you want, you can verify this. Have Wells Fargo illegally obtain the healthcare records of another 5,000 patients from that hospital. That hospital does as it pleases and so does Wells Fargo. This shouldn't be hard to do.

In those records, look for the patients that were having a psychosis, particularly those that had a psychosis as a component of a manic episode. The hospital staff may not always be thorough in documenting what the patients say, but you'll find plenty of examples.

I picture you justifying this criminal massacre by saying that I'm a "psychopath" and making these horrible characterizations of me. You may justify this based on my healthcare records. If you look it up on WebMD, it will not list saying disturbing and extreme things as a symptom of bipolar disorder. This is not a problem because the audience that my medical records are intended for are people who have no need to look up the symptoms of bipolar disorder on WebMD. They have years of education and specialized training, and almost all of them have a good bit of experience.

We have entered into a complete farce. We have a bank and a bunch of law enforcement people attempting to practice medicine and justifying the criminal massacre of a disabled man based on the conclusions that result from this ridiculous exercise that they've undertaken.

Do you really think you know this better than the more than a dozen medical professionals who have saw those records before you did? I'd like Wells Fargo to give me an example of a job that requires education, training, and experience. These people seem to have the notion that just anybody can do any job, and that's what got them into this mess. Bill Vanhoy is not qualified to run a credit department. He's also not qualified to practice medicine or to be a psychologist. As far as I know, NO ONE that works for Wells Fargo is qualified to practice medicine, and if some are, my medical history is none of their god damn business.

Here's what I needed-

-I needed Wells Fargo to be an employer.

-I needed Atrium Health to be a healthcare provider and to protect my privacy.

-I needed Broughton hospital to stop committing crimes against me. I also need them to have a security protocol for their release of information department.

When all of this didn't work out, I needed the United States Department of Justice to be a criminal and/or civil law enforcement agency. I don't need them taking over my healthcare. I need them to take this airtight case, that I built during a period of extreme and unbearable suffering, and hold these people accountable. I was so disabled that it took me 7 months to write my complaint, and when I sent it it wasn't even halfway done. 5 minutes of proofreading would get me 2 to 4 hours of pure hell with my symptoms. I even made a web portal for you. I mean it's on a silver platter.

I don't get what I need. I instead have the whole god damn world looking at my healthcare records, as if there is anything there for them to see and as if they are at all capable of interpreting or understanding them. These people at the Federal Reserve are the most extreme and cruel bigots I've ever met. I mean it defies reason and I don't even know how to describe it. It's probably the case that the people at the US DOJ share this same extreme prejudice.

In my audios I have spurts where I get mean and demeaning towards you. I also call you bigots and criminals on Twitter. You people have really pissed me off. I used to think that you are my friend. The point of this is that I will change my tune, at least slightly, if you will just help me. We've reached a point of no return however, and you can forget me being happy. You can forget any possibility that I go for as much as one single day where I do not think about this situation. It will dominate my life and I will always look forward to the day that I die.

I can also tell you that the chance that you get found out, concerning your cover-up and other crimes, is a least 95%. You will not get away with this. You will have to answer and it will reflect terribly on you.

--

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams

(980)-[REDACTED]
