

Leonard Clinton Williams III [REDACTED]@gmail.com>

Jan 10th, 2023, 1:29 PM

Re: I'm suffering terribly

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

I keep telling you that I'm going to die. This may come across as some sort of blackmail. It is not. Your reaction may be "then go get help and treatment." This reaction is based on a misunderstanding and a desire to outsource the consequences of this bank's behavior to someone else.

The outsourcing the cost is nothing new. Not much need to talk about that. The misunderstanding is the idea that there is any help for me. My brain is broken and it causes me terrible suffering. A brain is not like a car. They can't go in and fix what is damaged and then put it back together. Then the fact that I am handicapped makes everything so much worse. I spend so much time in terrible suffering. My living circumstances are also terrible. Life is torture for me.

What has the potential to help this is money. Money will not fix my broken brain. Money will allow me to have better living conditions. Money will allow me to pay people to do all the things that I cannot do for myself. Money will allow me to buy nice things and do other things that offset my suffering. Money will allow me to help people, which I like to do.

Even if I have money, life will be extremely hard. It will still consist of so much torment. But money will make it better. I want $10 billion. If I get less I will take it. A big priority is writing my book. If I get less than $10 billion, I will quite probably move to another country and then write my book. I'm not sure. I'd say for absolutely sure, if I get less than $3 billion.

The benefit of a smaller amount of money would be that I would be able to move to a better country that isn't governed by such a bunch of depraved criminals and that is more humane. I have thought of writing to the government of Switzerland and asking them to pay for me to move down there, in exchange for the copyright to my book. I would also need them to pay for my living expenses. I think the people in that country might care about me. I could go on their news networks and share my experience. My book will also be something else.

My book will defend me. It will explain me. It will tell the story of my life, lived in so much pain. It will tell the story of Wells Fargo murdering my soul and of the depraved murderers at the justice department pounding me with crime when my body was about to die. I will talk of the extreme and inhuman prejudice of the justice department and of the federal reserve.

You offer so many examples of everything that it is worth aspiring not to be. I do not know how to explain your corruption. It is quite a phenomenon.

I talk badly about you all the time in my emails. This may upset you or come across as not nice. When I say something and then you don't like it, you are skipping a step. The step in the middle is to consider the possibility that I have a reason to say what I say. And also to consider that what I say may be true. You might want to consider changing. But I would guess you skip all of that and just don't want to hear anything critical.

If the tables were turned and it were me, all of this criticism wouldn't bother me at all. I would care about you, as the person who is suffering. I would realize that my conduct is extremely immoral and inhuman. You could hit me with a bunch of slaps in the face like I do you, and my response would be to tell you I'm sorry and do whatever I could to help you.

I'm paying the price for this banks conduct. I'm paying it in full, and it is a thankless job. The global economy goes on at my expense, and there is nothing little enough that I can ask for that is not too much to ask. I asked for $5,000 multiple times in 2021. I couldn't even get that, when it would have lifted a mountain of stress off of me.

All I have to show for my fight for justice is a brain scan that was got for Wells Fargo, that my poor aunt paid for.

---

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams

(980)-