I got hostile over what I described below, a second ago in a complaint to the OIG. Sorry, but I can't help it. It is a symptom of the condition that is caused by this merciless abuse of me. I want to settle this peacefully and have everyone answer for their rotten conduct in a controlled, orderly fashion.

This is Leonard Williams III. You already have my contact info. I gave different details on the form to bypass any mechanism where my messages are automatically forwarded to Wells Fargo. I also have a different IP address.

I am concerned about the justice department and about our country, as of recent. I do not like the headlines about the economy and bank failures, etc. It make sense to be concerned about our country, but I find less reason to be concerned about the justice department. It's kind of irrational, because you've been sponsoring crimes against me.

You do this to save the economy, presumably, but it hurts no less and my behavior is not what has put the economy in jeopardy. It's against the rules for Wells Fargo to be responsible for Wells Fargo's conduct, so when Wells Fargo victimizes me, it's my fault. That's how you seem to reason.

The reason that I am contacting you is that I am severely ill and my severe illness causes me to suffer greatly. I have very severe brain damage from what Wells Fargo and its various accomplices have done to me. This causes me to profoundly suffer.

The Justice Department has given Wells Fargo free reign to abuse me as it wishes, and wells Fargo is obviously a powerful company that is capable of dishing out a lot of abuse. The Justice Department does this after I report very serious crimes to the Justice Department, and after Wells Fargo has already delivered, proactively, to the Justice Department, evidence of very serious crimes. The Justice Department will not protect me. I have tried to work things out with the justice department over and over, and the abuse does not cease. I will not tolerate much more of this before I take matters into my own hands. I will do so lawfully, but I feel like this situation would be much better handled in a controlled and deliberate manner.

I have the full ability to get my story in front of the masses, pretty much at will. I've got numerous knock out blows to deliver to Wells Fargo as part of this. Wells Fargo doesn't have a leg to stand on. Knock out might be an exaggeration, but I can hit them hard. It is likely to not be an orderly, controlled situation like that is necessary.

What I need done immediately is I need Wells Fargo to stop having people harass and belittle me on Twitter. This causes me enormous psychological distress and emotional pain, due to my disability. I have been getting pounded with merciless abuse from this bank for now almost 3 years, and it's been over 5 years since they first massacred my life.

It may be one or more law firms that Wells Fargo has assigned to this situation that is doing this. Whoever it is, they need to stop. At most I will give them 2 days to stop this behavior completely, but I'm not sure how long that I can last.

I say derogatory things about Wells Fargo on Twitter. These are things that are mostly accurate and based on Wells Fargo's actual conduct. Wells Fargo gets ridiculed because Wells Fargo's conduct is ridiculous. You can actually axe the word mostly. If Wells Fargo does not agree with what I say, they need to use their Wells Fargo Twitter account and reply.

I keep fighting because I'm fighting for my life. Wells Fargo has committed very serious crimes against me, and what is supposed to happen is Wells Fargo is supposed to make it right. Instead, I am massacred with more crimes, as I am helpless, and when I fight back, Wells Fargo seems to feel that Wells Fargo has a moral obligation to commit more crimes against me or engage in further egregiously unethical behavior against me.

It may sound a little off to you, to say that I'm fighting for my life, given that I've priced my victimization at $10 billion. For one, I've recently become less concerned about my life, at different times. What happens can happen, I have thought. Whether I live 10 more days or I live 10 more years, I cannot endure this cruel abuse. When the world hears the facts of my case, they will find my figure to be more than reasonable and probably drastically underpriced.

You may counter that it is not your role or not your concern or anything you can do anything about, what Wells Fargo or its legal people do on Twitter. I am aware of this fact. You are, however, a co-offender and someone who has a lot at stake. Your behavior is rotten and I have the full potential to expose every last bit of it. It is going to unfold in a very unpredictable and possibly disastrous way, if I end up with no choice but to take the fast route. I don't want bad things for you or for our country, and I'm willing to wish Wells Fargo well after they make it right.

This is my last attempt, at least for now, to be your friend. If they continue with this harassment, I will have no choice but to put my plan b in action, and I'm not sure how that will turn out and I truthfully don't like the sounds of it. As another consequence, Wells Fargo may retaliate by putting my private healthcare records on the internet, and this will cause untold and lasting harm to the mentally ill in our society. This will be yet another despicable consequence of Wells Fargo's conduct.

This bank needs to work it out and it needs to do better. It needs to conduct itself ethically. Please use whatever leverage that you have to have this behavior stopped as soon as possible. And I mean it needs to happen fast. If you have no leverage, that's a pretty sad state of affairs when you're the world's only superpower, and then that's just too bad, because I've had enough of this unrelenting abuse and I can't take any more. It's likely to be a bad day for you and for America, and it's very possible that it lasts more than a day.

I'll try to give you two days but I probably won't make it that far. Please message them asap and have this stopped. This bank and you have a lot to answer for and it is best handled in an orderly manner.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
