“ Do not be surprised if I am found dead at any time, in the near or medium term future.”

-if this sounds coercive, I don't really give a shit what you do, not really. What I'm saying is that I live in soul crushing despair, and it is very tempting to die. I have long term plans for my fight, or at least I did. Those keep me going and are a priority and a motivation. I could derail my plans on a whim at any moment, over this despair. It's kind of like being a smoker and you're offered some big prize for not smoking cigarettes for 3 months. The big prize is a motivator, but at any given second of any day, you could temporarily be absorbed in the moment enough to take one single puff.

sit here and tell you about my long term plans, and you think forward to the future as to how it will pan out. It might be shocking to you, or a surprise, if I send you an email about my agenda for July and august, and then less than 24 hours later I am dead.

I hate this situation and I hate you. I want to die.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
