This nightmare is going to get worse and I didn't do any of it. I am in extremely fragile condition. You're going to be in the news or some person or persons is/are going to die, or both.

You god damn fruitcakes need to listen to me and not your fruitcake experts. I am pretty much 100% certain that you have hired a team of psychologists and/or psychiatrists and the like. These people are telling you what you want to hear, and you are justifying your actions based on what they say. What they say is from another planet and I am solidly sitting here on earth. If they don't understand what I'm saying or they've never heard of such things, they need to pick up their god damn phone and call me. You've literally been sitting there for years running all of this by some psychologists/psychiatrists who have not spoken to me one single time about anything. This is the definition of a bullshit process. When I sent my complaint, or actually maybe a few weeks to a month after, I sent you the contact info for my old psychologist John, who is a PhD with 40 years experience and who has spent hundreds of hours observing and interacting with me, listening to my symptoms, etc. I gave him full ROI permission for you and others. How many phone calls did he get? Of course you didn't call him once, despite him obviously having a wealth of information and hard earned expertise concerning me.

Why didn't you call him? Because you are not interested in the truth. You are scared shitless of reality, and so you have designed a hermetic analysis process where the only people allowed to opine are a bunch of people who are biased against me and who are paid by Wells Fargo. Anyone who might say what you don't want to hear isn't allowed in or gets the boot, and I'm sure your paid help knows this on some level. The last thing you will ever do is involve me in this sealed and isolated analysis process. This is because I represent reality. I have been beating you with the reality stick for years, and I come with not much else than reality in everything that I say. It would be over in 10 minutes. I would call bullshit on the conclusions of your fruitcake experts and their fruitcake process, just like I definitively call bullshit on every other aspect of your ridiculous nonsense.

This is getting bad.
