"I went off the deep end because my mother is letting someone come over."

-she didn't exactly let him come over. He invites himself over and she doesn't do anything about it. He left about 50 minutes ago, following an altercation with me. He lasted about 10 minutes after I got out of bed. He yelled and me and I went off on him. He threatened to have me permanently institutionalized, and left shortly after. I think my actions towards him (which I don't care to describe) made him fear for what I might do to him while he's asleep, and basically made him fear for his life. I have told my mother, repeatedly, that I have to be by myself. I have told her repeatedly that me living with people in the house causes me enormous distress and creates a situation that feels dangerous to me (I am not interested in finding out if it is dangerous or not. People just need to listen to me). I would like for one person involved in this to listen to me. Not listening to me has had enormous costs, of which all or almost all have been paid by me, and the day is coming, I am very afraid, when someone else pays a large cost.

I told her to have the locks on the door changed. He has a key. I'm also going to have her put me on the next lease, so that I have real property rights and can have the police come and get him, if and when he shows up uninvited again. This is putting the heat on me to do something. This situation is horribly uncomfortable and makes me feel like it's dangerous.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
