Blackie is out for a walk. She will be so happy when she gets back. I've got her more than a quarter of a Subway chicken teriyaki sub. I bought a footlong. I'm still a little bit hungry, but I wanted to save a lot for her. I would feel sorrow and feel guilty if I didn't save any for her. She knows that she's going to get some of it as soon as mom walks through the door, and she gets so excited. She has been on cloud 9, loving every day, since I got approved for disability.

I have such profound sorrow and despair, and you are reading the words of a man who feels, everyday, like he is dying. I am in terrible despair right now. How do you do this to someone?

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
