The easiest thing to do, I think, is just to make this whole thing public. Make me anonymous but make what happened Public. I'm thinking about this, and if I'm ever sued or part of someone else's lawsuit, my medical records will be subpoenaed, most likely. What has occurred will inevitably come out. It's at least a chance that we take. I may or may not build an online presence. That would be the only way that I would be on anyone's radar enough for me to be anything other than almost totally invisible. I will not be going out anywhere, except to get food at certain restaurants. I used to go to papa John's to pick up orders I called in. I used to go to IHOP when they weren't busy. I'd stand in the line at cookout sometimes. I generally have a feeling like I want to stay away from people.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
