If it makes you the least little bit mad, the way that I go from being neutral, to being hostile, to being more friendly, and the way that I do things that are counter productive in getting this resolved, you are being completely ridiculous, and in that case, you may not even know it. Any attitude towards me other than one of bottomless mercy is missing the point completely and is also inhuman. I am a profoundly handicapped and profoundly injured person. You people have destroyed and ruined me as a human being. I cannot be held to any normal standard, and any standard at all, other than me just doing whatever I do, is excessive and extremely hard for me to meet. You can pretty much assume that I will not meet it. If you ever made an effort to assess my true condition, what I am saying would be uncovered very fast. There is some kind of brain scan, and I'm not sure which kind, that would reveal the abnormalities in my brain and/or its functioning. The neurologist or other doctor that ordered it and/or that interpreted the results would find that there is something extremely bad wrong with me.
