Re: Montage of me being right

If I run out of money, it's not going to be good. I am worn down extremely and hanging on by a thread. Another blow from this life will be too much. I'd rather finish my letter though. Maybe I start working on both at the same time.

I have mentioned figures in the billions of dollars. That's what it would take to make my life worth living. If you care to know, I would far prefer to get $20 million and $5 million a year, like I proposed, and not be known. I guess the way to say it is that my privacy and my status as not being known to the broader public is worth billions to me. It's worth more than that actually. If there's an announcement about this, everyone will find out who I am. The internet is too big for some person to not make the connection and then have it spread everywhere. If it is necessary that I be known, I should get far more. It's not like it matters. My life was over on November 30th, 2017. That day did me in for good, and I hate every single person having anything whatsoever to do with it.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
