

Leonard Clinton Williams III [REDACTED]@gmail.com>

Sep 29th, 2023, 6:36 AM

Re: Montage of me being right

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

"I would far prefer to get $20 million and $5 million a year, like I proposed, and not be known"

- this is going to make me mad, if I take it. I want these people punished. It would be worth being known for these people to be punished. It would destroy my life that much more, but I'd feel a lot better about the situation. My other main concern is having the right to keep my evidence. One thing you've got to realize is that no one really gives a shit about this. I don't get big, overblown reactions for the people who believe me. They are a minority. It sounds horrible to them. They have sympathy. But they are still mainly concerned with their own lives and none of it stops their world from turning. I think the weight of this situation, too, is something that would cause others not to want to get in the middle of it.

I just can't have people thinking I'm insane, taking away my medication, etc. over this. Every single person who has looked at my evidence has believed me. This includes people who have just looked at a small part of it. I also have people who haven't looked at my evidence but believe me. These are people who know me well enough to know that what I say is true. Among certain circles, I have a reputation for knowing things that it seems impossible for me to know, reading people's minds, analyzing people, all of the stuff along these lines. It's like "he says it, and it sounds crazy, but it's true." A commonality of the things I allege against others has been that they sound insane.

---

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams

(980)-[REDACTED]