So maybe you can do something on your end, where you discount the fluctuations. ChatGPT is far better at figuring this out than I am. When I am able I will ask it what's going on. It will give me better ideas for what to do. It had some eye opening insights my last round. If you are panicked about this situation making it to the public, or you have been on and off, maybe having a feeling of desperation, then ChatGPT is pretty accurate.

I am sorry that I told you I would make this stress free and then went back on it. But you have been at it again and it hurts my feelings. It was actually before I said that, that you hurt my feelings. The best day of my life will be the day that I die. That's what you've done to me. Why is it necessary to do anything more? But I understand. You are desperate.

I do exert my will too. Earlier I was about to blast the justice department on Twitter, and I made myself not do it.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
