I might make it. The way it works when you hit me with another blow is it gets stuck in my mind and I will think about it at different times of the day, in sort of a cycle. It's not a perfect cycle but the feature is that it goes on repeatedly, one time then the next will be at some later time. When I think of it, it feels like a brutal blow and it hurts me because I'm already weak and have already had the hell beaten out of me for years. You've damn near killed me I don't know how many times, but I'm extremely strong. This last one though I'm not to sure about.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
