And let's face it, it is a fact that it is unsafe to do business at Wells Fargo and, most likely, any other Wall Street bank. You could extend this to every big business in America. Whose fault is this? The agency that I'm addressing this email to, who will be the second party to read it, after Wells Fargo does. You turn the prosecution over to the offenders and give them full reign to mercilessly abuse the victim. This is what you do to a bank that has someone kidnapped 4 times in one night.

Is this remotely safe? It is safe to have these people in your life at all? Obviously not. So it's not like we're fulfilling some basic moral obligation, in hiding this fact from others. It is an immoral act of lying to every citizen of the United States and to the world.

I will keep your secret, I guess, as long as you make it right with me, but this is extremely not right. The only prayer that anyone who has been or is being harmed by this bank has is that the Justice Department itself has to pay the consequences of Wells Fargo's conduct. Until we reach that point, you're just going to outsource the consequences of the bank's conduct to the most powerless people you can find, using the lowest blow you can get away with.

If my analysis is wrong, pick up your god damn telephone and call me. Let's discuss this. Lie to me to my face, the same way that you lie about me behind my back. Or tell the truth, be open to seeing the very plain and obvious reality that I have known this entire time.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
