"I've got this quality where I hit where it hurts."

- it hurts because it is true. I'm very sorry to say. You have shown your utter contempt for the powerless, and your awe and reverence for and fear of the powerful. You're not a fan of the truth. Everything favors you and this bank, except the facts and the truth.

You are more powerful than me, but I say this to you anyways, because I do not share your cowardice. I was not scared of this bank, and you clearly are.

You need to get out of la la land. You've got one bullshit spiel after another, straight out of Pluto in each case. This bank is a criminal. Your agency has participated in and sponsored its crimes. You have participated in and sponsored a grotesque human rights abuse. Your approach to defending yourself for this is to knowingly and deliberately lie, about a kindhearted man, behind his back. These are the actions of indecent cowards. Are you indecent cowards, or do you just behave that way? I make attempt after attempt to give you a chance to show that you are better than this, and to see you in a good light, and you arrogantly and sadistically piss away every single one, with more chickenshit, cowardly abuse of a disabled man.

I take my apology back. You are people who are unworthy of respect, as long as you behave this way. and if the truth hurts you, it hurts me worse and has for years. You need to hear the truth. The facts are the tyranny of life. Wells Fargo is a tyranny and you are a tyranny, but the facts have the ability to tyrannize you, in a way that you will never escape, and the facts do not favor you.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
