If there is a lesson to be learned from what I've been through, it is this- don't go near this bank. Keep these people as far away from your life as you possibly can. For sure, do not do business with them.

They're out of control and will not fix their business, and you have to pay the consequences of their recklessness. They will not pay the consequences at all. Anything you ask for is far too much. Having a conversation is off the table. If you try to get them to pay this extremely inconsequential cost, for the destruction they have caused you, they will murder you. That's their attitude and that's the reality of what we're dealing with.
