I need a lot of money too, because of the climate crisis. If I live to say age 65, by the time I'm there my house will have been destroyed by extreme weather events at least 3 times.

This is the most terrifying thing. There is no way out, it seems. The greatest hope we have is geo-engineering, with development aided by AI. AI is getting up there now. A server farm with an IQ of 76000 could come up with some really good ideas, and that's where we're headed.

It's the uphill battle of the century, trying to get China and other nations to rapidly decarbonize. That's the next step, after the UK and the US get on board, which is pretty much impossible. We've got one impossible challenge after another. It is brutal to think about.
