My friend on Twitter that I copied and pasted the message about, if you can help me help her that counts for something. I will not settle for anything less than an essentially 100% probability that her abuser gets put in prison. If I run a private investigation and cherry pick the appropriate experts, I can do it. He's a dead man walking, so to speak; he just doesn't know it yet. Without doing the math, it seems like an about $2 million project. You've done way more investigations than I have, and so maybe that sounds cheap (or expensive) to you.

If you have some way, through your experience, to examine her evidence and counsel the authorities in the UK, to all but guarantee he gets canned, that would possibly save some bucks. I will take any help I can get in any case. Your involvement would do nothing but help, no matter the circumstances.

I'd like to dig into his life very intensively. He's got more victims; I am sure. Ideally I can get him hit with one or more sledgehammer blows from the criminal justice system, and then have everything he owns liquidated a civil process.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
