My medicine is getting into my system and I'm starting to feel a little bit better. Today might be a day where I get something done. Not sure what I will work on. I get a lot of satisfaction out of getting things done.

I want to do something about the climate crisis but there is not much that I can do. The fossil fuels people and a lot of the government wants to make technology a big part of the solution. The scientists focus on rapidly downsizing the fossil fuels industry, getting to 0 eventually.

I would like to see the scientists and the fossil fuels people strike a deal, along with the public. I don't like fossil fuels industry's commitment to keep up with business as usual. They don't want to downscale at all any time soon. Downscaling their operations would mitigate the environmental impacts.

I also don't understand why the scientists do not even seem to consider technology.

I can't type any more.

Clint Williams
