This is the justice department's first go round with a situation like mine. It is so bizarre as to be pretty likely to never occur again. If it does, you know how to go about it better. I would be much happier in my own place. I can't take just nothing. I want the absolute most that can be justified. I have to pay people to do stuff for me that I cannot do. That will be for the rest of my life. My psychologist can tell how impaired that I am in general, but when I was explaining to her my neurological impairment and the way stuff taxes my mind, it was impressing on her. It was like she'd never heard anything quite like this before.

I've got ideas for how we can justify a larger settlement. Then I can get paid inflated prices for training materials and possibly also software. It would take me forever to make either. Training materials would be faster. I could make a hell of an application for making financial spreads. Problem is it would take me forever and a day. It might be 10 years. Idk.
