When my medication is not in my system living itself feels like torture. I woke up about 3 hours ago, from falling asleep earlier. I was going to try to go back to sleep, but it's not working. I just took my "morning" medication. It is taking time to get in my system. The torment had started to set in. I'm feeling fairly tortured right now. It will get better, but I hate having to live like this. Suffering dominates my life.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
