I'm never going to get this done. The mere act of trying is crushing and simultaneously paralyzing me. I'm making a summary of some things, that will tie my medical records together and give them coherence. It will also serve to have my complete account documented, as my records are obviously not verbatim accounts.

My complaint isn't good for this for numerous reasons. That's why I need a more concise summary that is also more detailed in some aspects. Right now I'm explaining what I went through in the mountains and how the people at WFB behavior was exactly the same. I need to go beyond "I was treated in a way that is reminiscent of..."

That statement doesn't add anything to someone's understanding. It functions as an assertion or a part of a narrative that people aren't likely to understand.

And I say I'm explaining. I'm trying and getting massacred with shell shock before I can type even one word.

I'm thinking about recording a description and then using AWS AI to transcribe it. It will be a freaking mess and I'll be hyperventilating and screaming while I'm doing it.

What has been done to me is terrible.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
