My mothers friend has stolen almost every book that I have. Most of the boxes of books from my apartment were put in my building in TN. It is right below the old house that he robbed blind. It also had stuff my family was storing. It is easy to break in to it. It is out and away from everyone, and people are honest. Our stuff was fine there for over 25 years. Then he came along. Stuff got gone right and left, and my uncle caught him in a lie regarding the WWII chest my grandfather left us, that was in that old house.

He's figured out how to get in that building. My kid sisters dad left her some very expensive guitars. They were among the first things to get gone. Last time mom was there, the whole building had been wiped out, except my pool table and some boxes of books on top of it. He's went in there and took his time to organize everything, so that he could take it all. When he took those guitars, he did a b-line for them. There were boxes of books knocked over and spilled all over the place on the path he'd had to take to get from the door to those guitars.

My mother is delusional about these men. She doesn't believe it is him stealing, even though it is obvious that it is. She told me one time "last time me and Charles was up at that building, he showed me how he can just open the door without even having to use the key." Gee, I wonder when he figured that out. Anne that's exactly what I need in my life. I need someone with a talent for opening locked doors without using a key.
