"It has the book and the link and the price for each book."

- valuing my property for my bankruptcy was easy, because 97% of my personal property was bought on Amazon. She got it all. For the books, I took the purchase price and multiplied it by .33. That's a good method to use for used books. The trustee had no problem with it. I think that, overall, the trustee was happy with me. Most of the pro se people struggle with the process way more than I did. I'd say pretty much all of them. It can make it tough on the trustee to get all the info that he needs. You have to reference laws when you exempt your property. That's one thing. Most people don't know much about laws.

I am currently having a string of days where I'm impaired. I may be down for the count again today.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
