

Leonard Clinton Williams III [REDACTED]@gmail.com>

Feb 8th, 2024, 8:12 PM

Re: Email for Feb 7th, 2024

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

Part of this is that I have been confused the entire time. Or when I'm not confused, I am feeling confident, for some period of time, about an outcome that is totally in outer space. This is like me thinking that everyone had conceded that I was getting money out of this, and you were waiting for me to put it in the news so that I could get billions of dollars. This is nothing at all like how you think. But I have no idea what to do and why you're doing what you're doing for almost all of the time. I get anxious about dealing with you too. That's what happened after I proposed $20 million. I was intent on settling when I said that, but then I got worried about being scammed. It's like the money goes in my account and I think I'm good, but when the federal reserve "illegally" siphons it out of my account, as some kind of tactic, I'm going to complain to who? I thought about things along these lines. Then there have been times that I've thought you wouldn't consider giving me anything that is remotely fair. That had me thinking about the media at times.

The way I work is I need to know what we're working with and how this works. When I know that, I can figure out how to get true most out of the situation for me, without compromising your necessities. It's like there's a deal to be cut, and there are certain limits, and that's what we work within. Sometimes we can get creative and extend the limits, but the functions the limits were in place for have to be kept intact. Like if the limit is "we can't possibly justify more than $x for this", it may be that we can find a way to justify more, if we think about it, but the constraint still exists that this has to be passable to the auditors. Being passable to the auditors, in this example, is the ultimate constraint.

I'm a good investigator in contexts like this, but there are limits to what I'm good at. What my process needs to be is I turn over a complaint to the justice department, having good intentions, and the justice department tells me the process and how I get a resolution. I don't know the magic that you do behind the scenes or the mundane tasks or any of it. It's like you do this for a living, my territory is to turn you over a complaint, and your territory is to tell me what I have to do to get something out of this. If that second step is left up to me, we're going to be on the merry go round for years (and we have been). I'm shooting in the dark as a person who has no intuitive feel for things like this.

Looking back, I think you had sort of benign intentions with everything that was going on with these hospitals, but then I threw a wrench in everything because I figure everything out and fight back. I'm a peculiar person and I live in my own little world. I possibly miss the big picture quite often, and I fight back as a reflex. It's like I feel like I'm under attack and I don't think about much past that.

I am nearly dead.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams

(980)-[REDACTED]
