It will be hard for me to get a lawyer on my own. I tried a lot in 2019. I also tried some in 2020 and a little in 2021. It was mostly desperation in 2021, because of the condition I was in. Rightly or wrongly, I pictured it as a 100% probability that my lawyer is bought and works against me. It seemed like a pointless thing. I wanted to get my case in the media to put it in the spotlight. I thought that would make it harder for a pay off of my legal counsel to happen, if we even got that far.

Then, in 2022 or 2023, I had a surefire way to get an attorney, and I found out something then. I found out that I am scared of the whole process, because in addition to my lawyer being bought, I feared more crimes. If I had an attorney make an offer to represent me in 2021, that would have come up then.

I have said all kinds of horrible things about the Justice Department online. I have deleted most of it, but part of that is that I have a deficit in self-control. I have trouble censoring myself, and I have had no direction for most of this. It is just a haphazard process where I don't know what I'm supposed to do. I did have a consistent drive to get this in the news for a long time. But other than that, I just suffer and don't know what I'm supposed to do. If I had some kind of outcome, where someone told me "we're working on this. We just need to situation kept quiet while we figure this out" I would have been better able to inhibit myself.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
