

Leonard Clinton Williams III [REDACTED]@gmail.com>

Apr 19th, 2024, 11:05 PM

Re: audio about my rationale

To: "Division, Criminal (CRM)" <Criminal.Division@usdoj.gov>, civil.feedback@usdoj.gov

My best guess is a heart attack. There is a clenching feeling in my heart when this happens. It has to do with my system being weak. When I was damn near dying in 2021, I had an intuition that taking an extra adderall would help me, and it did. I would repeatedly be about to go, and it reduced that by a lot. This was on one single day. I had taken 20 mg of zyprexa and it had weakened my already weak system. The next day, I toned it down to 5 mg or maybe 10. Seems like it was 5. There is something very different about my intuition and that of most other people.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams

(980)-[REDACTED]