Re: This is what is doing it

I just emailed them. I am going to ask for their advice. I really think that I need to get my medical care done so that I have my injury documented. I think they will agree. My plan for this is to get the absolute most that I can get without creating some issue on the bank's audit. I will ride it out as long as I can, on that money. I think I can have a pretty nice life for quite a while.

I am horrified by the climate crisis, and I don't think I'll be able to survive on anything less than the numbers I have given you in any scenario. I'm speaking of $20 million + $3 million annually and the $30 million + $5 million. I will be keeping my eye on Switzerland as my money runs out and as things get harder. I don't want that country to go to shit as the result of repeated extreme weather events. It is the best place to live. I like the familiar United states of America for now.

I fully expect you to pay off my lawyer, but I'm just going to pretend that you won't. If/when you do, you can be fair to me, I will be glad to have my own place + be able to enjoy life. I have thought that the thing to do might be to rent, instead of own, for as long as I live. If you spend a bunch of money on a house, you risk losing it all due to an extreme weather event. You can't lose too many houses in a row without depleting your funds excessively.

I need my adderall upped more. I have had it upped several times, and I think I need it upped by another 50% to 100% of my current dosage. A competent neurologist will agree with me.

I will keep you posted.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
