You are terrorists and the day is likely coming that you will be murderers. I will go into the ground as the man that I am, which is a far better fate than living in luxury, but at the cost of being people like you or people like the people at this bank. You look in the mirror and see a moral coward, who has no decency, no principles, and who has sold his or her soul. You see someone who has put effort into flattering yourself, but who has put no effort into conducting yourself in a way that flatterers you.

I aspired to amount to something in moral terms, in my life. You aspire to have an easy day and an easy life. I seek to take the moral high ground in all that I do, even as I do sometimes fail. You are people who savor the ease that can be obtained by taking the lowest ground available. You like what your indecency can buy you. It is a great bargain for you, because you value ease in life and you place no value in having decency in the way you live.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
