Part of what you've got to understand is that I would prefer to settle this out of court, with as little visibility as is possible. That is just how I am. When you rev me up, I get in a mindset to fight back. I don't like how we have a double standard, where the bank runs scams and then we've got to do things according to the rules when it comes to me. I don't understand this situation. There is something you know that I do not. You've got to remember that I suffer from limitations and I live in my own world. Maybe that makes sense to you in retrospect. I tend to think that anyone who sees the big picture would not have went about this the way that I did, where I'm one person and the bank is one person and the authorities are going to see us as equals and take my side. It took me a very long time, a period of years, before it dawned on me how completely insane this is. I had to think about it a lot.

Warmest Regards,

Clint Williams
