I am watching my programming instructional videos. I bought a collection of 67 videos with my backpay money. It is extremely enjoyable. If I am going to build a model of the earth's systems, I am not sure how I will be able to do it. I would have to learn a lot of physics. I would have to buy physics textbooks. The way you learn something like that is by doing the problems by hand. If you're not familiar with how higher level physics classes go, the main piece is hard math problems. It is word problems. You have to read the problem to figure out how to set up your equation.

There is no other way to learn that I'm aware of, other than to get a piece of paper and do it by hand. I cannot write with a pencil and paper, at least not easily. It causes me to feel extremely distressed and it fries my brain fast.

My project to build a model of the earth's systems + the economy sounds overly ambitious, by a factor of about 20 or maybe 50. I will still try. I think I will be able to figure it out. Our civilization is going to progressively collapse. We are really in for it if we don't do something about the climate crisis. That will bring huge devastation in the short term. No matter what we do, it will be extremely helpful to have a complete model.
