

About My Promise

I promised you to not talk about this to any media or to any lawyer until the 15th. I believe that I may have promised not to talk about it to any “new” people. I know that I have at least mentioned that. Thinking back, I may have possibly said that I will not bring up all of this to Atrium again. I didn’t remember that part, if I did say that, in my meeting the other day.

I have kept my promise concerning the media and lawyers. I did tell one new person, and she didn’t believe me. In Atrium’s case, I was very upset and agitated over my suffering. That was what triggered my behavior and it was on an impulse.

As I explain in other communications, my suffering over the threat of my life in Charlotte tanking is what drives my behavior. This suffering causes great hardship on me.

It has taken extreme effort to keep this promise, due to my suffering. I have almost broke many, many times. It seems like I may have given in a few times. I am a man of my word, and my suffering makes this extremely difficult. Had I not been suffering so intensely, I would have had no problem keeping this promise. That I have mostly lived up to it shows my character.
