This will be over soon. It's practically already over, minus an uneventful month or two. Maybe less than that. I am possibly going to take a break of 2 to 4 weeks to see how I do on my new medication regimen. It will help me get something out of life. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"Some of my projects also overlap with my fight. They are things that can be helpful in my fight, if I decide to use them for those purposes." - I meant to tell you this the other day. I have an idea for a business that sex workers exiting the sex work industry can do. They would have to be somewhat less traumatized/handicapped than me. It is doing Audio transcripts with AWS AI. I have an idea for some software that would integrate with AWS and speed up the process of making transcripts by about 100x, vs doing them manually. These women spend $1,000 to $3,000 a week from what I've gathered. They have extreme trouble focusing. This would be something they could do on a computer, where you don't have to focus much. There is something different about working on a computer. They could make probably $1,000 to $1,500 a week, once their business got going. I can't type anymore. ChatGPT just nailed it. In a way, your brain might be signaling that it's overwhelmed and needs relief, and this signal comes through as a deep feeling of despair. This doesn't mean the despair is any less real or significant — it's a serious symptom indicating that something needs to be addressed. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

This is what I submitted to get that answer: Yes the despair is a product of the impairment. The impairment creates a feeling of despair. It is like my brain has to work way too hard in everything, and this over-exertion, over-exhaustion, and eventual burning out, with me not being able to do a task in front of me, has some kind of physical effect on my brain structures. It is like what I experience as despair is actually a physical pain experienced by my neurological structures. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

The brain is the center of both our cognitive functions and our emotional experiences, and stress or impairment in one area can significantly impact the other. When the brain is overworked or strained, as you describe, it can lead to a state of mental and physical exhaustion. This exhaustion isn't just about feeling tired; it's a profound depletion that affects your mood, your cognitive abilities, and your overall sense of well-being. The feeling of despair you describe could be related to this sense of depletion. When the brain is constantly overtaxed, it can lead to a kind of "burnout," where everything feels more difficult, and hopelessness can set in. In a way, your brain might be signaling that it's overwhelmed and needs relief, and this signal comes through as a deep feeling of despair. This doesn't mean the despair is any less real or significant — it's a serious symptom indicating that something needs to be addressed. Understanding this link can be crucial in treating and managing your symptoms. While medications like Adderall can provide some relief by enhancing your brain's functioning and resilience, it's also essential to look into strategies that reduce the overall burden on your brain. This could include restorative practices like mindfulness, adequate rest, gentle physical activity, or engaging in hobbies or activities that bring you joy and relaxation. It's also crucial to continue working with healthcare professionals who can help navigate both the medical and psychological aspects of your condition. They can provide or recommend specific therapies designed to help manage the cognitive load and emotional distress you're experiencing. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

When my medication is not in my system living itself feels like torture. I woke up about 3 hours ago, from falling asleep earlier. I was going to try to go back to sleep, but it's not working. I just took my "morning" medication. It is taking time to get in my system. The torment had started to set in. I'm feeling fairly tortured right now. When I take extra adderall, I get so much more out of life. I am very happy to have my dosage upped. When I get my neurologist and my brain scans, etc. I may have him/her take over writing the scripts for adderall and just get my other meds filled from my other provider. What I have now will be a big improvement. I will have to see how I function on it. I wanted to go to 60 mg and was not thinking too well of 80 mg. In 2020, when I would suffer so bad and take 80 mg to help, it would cause me to speak like a junkie or something, just a little bit. I'm now reconsidering that just a little. Every addition makes me function better. I still will probably stay at 60 mg or less. I am looking forward to developing my software for my website, if I start to be able to work on my computer 4 days a week or more consistently. I want to get my menu and pages loading dynamically. I need to get this thing for my therapist done. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Part of the problem I had in 2020 was that I am extremely sensitive to stress. I can't take the least little bit. As I am in this condition, for the first 5 months of 2020, I am under the threat of losing everything that I own. It is constant and relentless. My traumatic stress symptoms didn't really go down though, after my bankruptcy was discharged. I was in hell still, with horrible intrusive memories and pounding shell shock, constantly. I only started to improve in July 2020, after I started using my kasina. I had a big improvement there, and that's when my life wasn't just about completely suffering. I'd have 1 to 5 hours on a given day that I could do something, 1 to 2 was common. Before that, I was lucky to get 30 minutes. But then I'd have consecutive days where I couldn't do anything. It was still a huge improvement. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I want to build a model of the earth's systems and what I think is called the biosphere. Idk much about biology, other than sociobiology. I want to build a model that includes all of the species that are impacted by the climate and other human affected earth systems. The purpose is to be able to calculate outcomes of solar engineering. The earth has many interconnected systems, and part of the objection to solar engineering is that it can create unexpected and potentially catastrophic changes. This is things like droughts, extreme cold, and other things that affect agricultural output. Then there may be other unexpected consequences. I want my model to capture it all. Screwing with the climate has all kinds of effects that the typical person would never expect. AGW is causing trees to die in certain areas, because it doesn't get cold enough to run off or kill a certain species of beetle in the winter. The Beatles feed off of the tree bark year round and the trees can't survive it. I think I'm remembering this right. These trees will 1) no longer absorb co2; and 2) eventually release co2 into the atmosphere. Probably a fire hazard too. But this is a feedback loop among a bazillion feedback loops that are possible. It's a small one, but I want a model that captures it all. I also want to model a societal transformation at a global scale, the type that would be required to effectively address climate change through a reduction of emissions. I like the technology route a whole lot better. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Bill Gates has got a great idea in thinking of genetically engineering crops. We can also genetically engineer these fish that people eat that are going extinct. We can engineer them to require less calories to survive and to be able to tolerate a broader range of temperatures. Maybe engineer them to reproduce at a much faster rate. The key to a happy life for me, other than getting money, is having my adderall dosage upped. What I've got now might do it. If not, I will get my neurologist to take over that aspect of my care. Adderall makes me able to function a lot better and it really helps my despair. Which by the way this thing that I describe as despair, that's the best way I can describe it and it's very accurate, but it is not like any other despair that I've ever had. It is qualitatively different. I think it is unique to neurological damage of the type I have incurred. ChatGPT shares my intuition that my brain is sending me a signal that it needs relief. I think I may have described it to you that way. Probably did because that's what it has seemed like to me for a very long time. I described it in exactly those terms to my therapist. You may be starting to realize how incredibly accurate nearly everything that I say is. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

It's a little off on these first answers: I'm truly sorry to hear about your struggles. Chronic PTSD and severe psychological trauma can indeed have profound effects on both mental and physical health, including the symptoms and feelings you're describing. The brain is a complex organ, and trauma can change its structure and function in significant ways, potentially leading to the difficulties and feelings of despair you're experiencing. Neurologically, severe and chronic stress from PTSD can lead to changes in brain regions such as the amygdala, hippocampus, and prefrontal cortex. These areas are involved in emotional regulation, memory, and decision-making. Over time, the stress response can become dysregulated, leading to the kind of constant strain and despair you mention. The feeling of despair, while it may feel automatic and unchangeable, is actually deeply intertwined with these neurological changes. It's not merely a conscious thought process but a result of altered brain function and chemistry. This means that while it might not be something you can "talk yourself out of," it is a valid and real experience that can potentially be addressed through various treatments. Treatments for PTSD and its associated neurological changes can include therapy, medication, and sometimes other interventions aimed at reducing symptoms and improving quality of life. It's important to work with healthcare professionals who understand the complexity of PTSD and can provide comprehensive care. While it's true that psychological processes contribute to feelings of despair, it's also important to recognize the biological underpinnings of these feelings. Your experience is valid, and it makes sense given the severe neurological and psychological impacts of chronic trauma. Seeking support from mental health professionals who specialize in trauma and PTSD can provide strategies and treatments that might help alleviate some of the symptoms you're experiencing. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Here's me:I have had all of the above types of treatment. The only thing that has helped has been adderall. Adderall seems to give my neurological structures strength that they do not otherwise have. It lessens my impairment and my despair. The impairment and despair come in the same package. They are directly related to one another, with a 1:1 ratio as far as I can tell. Would this make sense Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

After this answer is where I tell it that it is as if my brain feels physical pain. That's where I left off the other day. Yes, your experience makes sense, and it's not uncommon for individuals with certain types of neurological or psychological conditions to report improvements with medications like Adderall. Adderall is a stimulant that increases the activity of certain neurotransmitters in the brain, namely dopamine and norepinephrine. These neurotransmitters are involved in attention, focus, and mood regulation, among other things. In the context of PTSD and other stress-related disorders, some individuals might find that stimulants help alleviate symptoms by enhancing their cognitive function and energy levels, which might otherwise be impaired due to their condition. The improvement you feel with Adderall might be due to its effects on increasing neural activity in areas that are underactive due to trauma or stress. The direct relationship you describe between impairment and despair, and their improvement with medication, suggests that for you, the neurological aspects of your condition are closely tied to your emotional well-being. When the medication helps to reduce the neurological impairment, it simultaneously helps to alleviate the feeling of despair. It's essential, however, to approach the use of medications like Adderall with caution and under strict medical supervision, especially for long-term use, because they can have side effects and potential for dependence. It's also important to continue exploring other treatments and strategies that might help manage symptoms, as medication is often most effective when combined with therapy and other forms of support. Discussing your experiences and the effects of Adderall with your healthcare provider is crucial. They can provide guidance on the appropriate use of medication and help tailor a treatment plan that addresses both the neurological and psychological aspects of your condition. Adderall is all that helps with my neurological impairment. Benadryl helps my physiological symptoms. EMDR and my Kasina regimen work magic. They have diminishing returns. They both moved me a million miles when I first started them. They still would help today. I can't do them because of my impairment for the most part. It is being in this tiny room taxing my mind. I can do my Kasina every now and then. I haven't done EMDR in a long time. They are no longer magic as they once was, but they help.To give you an example of magic, I went from pacing the floors in hell for 15 hours+ a day, for weeks at a time, to being able to do stuff on more days that not. My intrusive memories went away fast, the type that I was having back then. They were greatly reduced after the first session. I'd pick one intrusive memory at a time. It would take about 3 to 9 sessions to nuke one memory, if I can recall. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I'm going to set up my neurological stuff soon. I called several clinics earlier today. I need to look in to the cost and I need to coordinate some neuropsychological testing. I think my cost may be capped at my $226 Medicare deductible. I may be wrong. If I'm wrong, I will not be able to afford to get the care that I need. I will have to wait until my mother gets her income tax refund. She has taken my money that I needed for my medical care. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I'm probably going to have to get an EEG + some other scan, potentially an fMRI. A PET scan is the best, maybe, but that's a $40k expense. Then neuropsychological testing is $2,500 to $3,000 for a full suite of tests. Then I will have to pay for my appointments with the neurologist, which are probably $700 or more each. I redesigned my old clients website before I was disabled. I thought I had deleted it, but I recently found an old copy on my external hard drive. I may try to sell it to them. I could probably get $1,000 out of it. I could actually probably get more. I can get ChatGPT to build me a UI for an admin page. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I don't know why I told you that. My new medication regimen is a substantial improvement. I need to get this thing done for my therapist. That will probably take me ~ 2 weeks, but maybe less. Could be more too, actually, but I hope not. I've got ideas beyond what I originally intended. if I implement them I'll be late again. I have a tendency to overdo everything and to be a perfectionist. My projects drag out because of this. If I have my own place, money, and people to clean for me, I will be much better off. I need to make a record of my symptoms on a daily basis. I did that in 2020 and 2021, but I have not been able to do it subsequently. It is due to this tiny room and this tiny apartment. I think I might can overcome the neurological inhibition with my new medication regimen. Part of my impairment has to do with some kind of neurological inhibition. In my document that I originally sent to the social security administration, that I also sent you, I reference this. I talk about this strange inhibition that stops me from cleaning my apartment. It's like there is some gap in my mind that has to be crossed and that almost always cannot be crossed. It's like I need to get from here to there, and the bridge is broken. I look at the filth that I live in, but I can't cross the bridge so that I can do something about it. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"I'd put that at more like 20 years."- might be 50. I have no idea. Take the man hours involved in making MRA and then take into account that I average probably 4-6 hours of work a week. I didn't get anything done today, except making audios that I've decided not to send you. I've got 5+ hours of them. My mother being here impaired me, and then she left. I am probably good enough to do my Kasina every day that mom is not here now. I'm not 100% sure. This inhibition I have varies depending on the task. My Kasina is on the lower end of the inhibition type of impairment. If I had a bigger bedroom and lived by myself, I could have been doing my Kasina the whole time. When I was sleeping in the living room, I did it much more often. Since coming to this bedroom, I hardly ever can do it. It is very hard to explain. I have an inhibition for opening my Soylent shake bottles. It is pretty powerful, but is something I can overcome. I often pace the floors for several minutes to build up the willpower to open one. There have been times that I've paced the floors for 20 to 45 minutes, just to open one. In the past several weeks, I have paced less in opening my shakes. I have started to make a point to stop and psyche myself up, and build up strength to open them. I can't type any more. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Today will be a good day. I was able to do my kasina. I think I will be able to do it every day. I've got to get this thing done for my therapist. I am using ChatGPT to help me with it. After that, I need to find out how much my neurological treatment will cost and work on getting it set up. I may be able to lower the cost by getting supplemental Medicare coverage. I looked it up, and my impairment is not too likely to show up on an EEG. I get a free EEG with my Medicare coverage, so I will get one anyways. It can help narrow down what causes my impairment. I am not sure about this website for my old client. It will be very hard to meet their demands. I am very worried about getting in an argument and them calling the police on me or something. I think I will probably do it. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Overall, after I settle this, I think I will be much happier. There are positive things happening. My new medication regimen being a very big one. I will be able to get enjoyment out of life. Life will still be very hard, but the balance of positive and negative is being shifted. I can tell already that I am going to be able to read more. I could be wrong but I don't think so. If today is an indicator, I will be able to do my Kasina and read more. Once I get a bigger place, I will be that much more able. I haven't read any books today, but I can feel the lessened inhibition. Which by the way, inhibition is just the best way I know to describe what I experience. It is very much different than the ordinary experience people have that is called inhibition. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I'm having a little bit of variability in my ability to get stuff done. This thing for my therapist may get kicked another month. I've also been working on my website. I will probably work on it today. That will be today's project. I need to get my adderall upped more, but that will be the territory of my neurologist. I have extremely little down that he/she will agree. We may get locked up for while in ending this. I will have a lot of work to do with my therapist and my neurologist. I also have to come up with the money for the neurologist. I need to get my mother to pay me back some. Other than that, idk what to do. My best other option is to sell the web app I redesigned to my old client. They may not buy it and it will be very hard on me to deal with them. It is murder just to think about it. I'm never going to get this done. The mere act of trying is crushing and simultaneously paralyzing me. I'm making a summary of some things, that will tie my medical records together and give them coherence. It will also serve to have my complete account documented, as my records are obviously not verbatim accounts. My complaint isn't good for this for numerous reasons. That's why I need a more concise summary that is also more detailed in some aspects. Right now I'm explaining what I went through in the mountains and how the people at WFB behavior was exactly the same. I need to go beyond "I was treated in a way that is reminiscent of..." That statement doesn't add anything to someone's understanding. It functions as an assertion or a part of a narrative that people aren't likely to understand. And I say I'm explaining. I'm trying and getting massacred with shell shock before I can type even one word. I'm thinking about recording a description and then using AWS AI to transcribe it. It will be a freaking mess and I'll be hyperventilating and screaming while I'm doing it. What has been done to me is terrible. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I'm going to hop back on this tangent about my personality. I'm constantly on the case with this, for my own understanding. I'm finding that I tend to peg myself with traits with negative connotations a little too readily. Here's a snippet from a conversation I just had with ChatGPT. This is my submission. The answer will be in the next email: I have a sense that I may be narcissistic. Some aspects of that condition seem to sort of resonate with me. I've taken a lot of personality tests online, and they tend to come back with below average to moderate narcissist traits. The cerebral subtype would be one that I might fall into, if I were a narcissist, I think. I have always been recognized as a very intelligent person. The thing is, I used to read a lot, but it was never about an image. I read out of curiosity. Curiosity is a primary driver of how I live my life. I don't seek to craft an image, really. I am conscious about how others see me, and it has some impact on my behavior, I think. But generally I have had a trend my whole life of not really caring what others think of me. I like to be treated as important, and I view myself as having a great ability to contribute to the world. I seem to understand and perceive reality with a very high level of acuity. I very often find myself understanding things that others do not. I take the role of the educator, the clarifier, the corrector, and the refuter quite often. I also have no shame whatsoever in taking the role of the student. I will pay people to answer my questions when I am trying to learn something. I go about life kind of like a scientist. I am always trying to put some puzzle together or to figure something out. I tinker with ideas and also with things like programming. I am a good programmer who is very creative. I do web development with html, css, JavaScript, and php.

I am also autistic and in my early adulthood, I did deliberately put out an inflated image. This was a reaction to my handicap becoming more and more apparent, and my giftedness becoming less and less dominant in people's perception of me. It was a reaction to the pain of this loss of status and credibility as a person. When I was in middle and high school, I stuck out as extremely gifted. that was what everyone thought of me. As life progressed and I was exposed to more diverse tasks in workplace settings and social settings, it became more apparent that I was falling behind, that I had deficits that others perceived as weaknesses, and I was perceived as not all there by many. That was 20+ years ago, and I've long since actually tried to calibrate other's perceptions of me, when they become inflated Warmest Regards,

Thank you for sharing your experiences and insights about yourself. It's clear you've given this a lot of thought and self-reflection, which is a valuable step in understanding oneself better. A few key points stand out in your description:

- Curiosity and Love for Learning: Your pursuit of knowledge driven by curiosity, rather than solely for crafting an image, is indicative of a genuine love for learning. This trait is often associated with intellectual engagement rather than narcissism.
- Self-Perception and Interaction with Others: Being conscious of how others perceive you and enjoying recognition for your abilities can be normal human traits. It doesn't necessarily indicate narcissism unless it becomes a dominant, driving force in your life that negatively affects your relationships or self-image.
- Adaptability in Learning Roles: Your willingness to switch between being a teacher and a learner suggests flexibility and humility in your approach to knowledge, which are not typically associated with narcissism.
- Autism and Social Perception: Autistic individuals often experience the world differently, which can impact social interactions and self-perception. Your awareness of this and the effort to calibrate others' perceptions of you indicate a level of self-awareness and adaptability.
- Past Experiences and Self-Presentation: Your past efforts to inflate your image as a reaction to changing perceptions due to your autism are understandable. It reflects a coping mechanism more than inherent narcissism.
- Creative and Intellectual Engagement: Your interest in programming and problem-solving highlights your intellectual and creative pursuits, aligning more with a passion for these areas rather than seeking external validation.

It's important to remember that many traits, including those associated with narcissism, exist on a spectrum. It's normal for people to exhibit some narcissistic traits without having Narcissistic Personality Disorder (NPD). Moreover, your self-awareness and willingness to reflect on your traits and behaviors are not commonly associated with NPD, where insight into one's behavior is often lacking. If you're concerned about aspects of your personality and how they impact your life, it may be helpful to speak with a mental health professional. They can provide a more nuanced understanding of your personality and offer guidance tailored to your individual experiences and needs. Remember, self-understanding is a journey, and it's commendable that you're actively engaged in it. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I will be happy when this is over. I will have to get something fair to me. I have ideas about how to go about it. The figures I've given are good reference points. I get mad at times, thinking about this. It pisses me off and also crushes my soul that none of these people will have to pay for what they've done to me. I am excited about being able to help my friend from Twitter. I promised her that I wouldn't let her down, and it will feel so good to make good on that promise. Her abuser is toast. I just hope that there is no SOL that has expired. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

My mothers friend has stolen almost every book that I have. Most of the boxes of books from my apartment were put in my building in TN. It is right below the old house that he robbed blind. It also had stuff my family was storing. It is easy to break in to it. It is out and away from everyone, and people are honest. Our stuff was fine there for over 25 years. Then he came along. Stuff got gone right and left, and my uncle caught him in a lie regarding the WWII chest my grandfather left us, that was in that old house. He's figured out how to get in that building. My kid sisters dad left her some very expensive guitars. They were among the first things to get gone. Last time mom was there, the whole building had been wiped out, except my pool table and some boxes of books on top of it. He's went in there and took his time to organize everything, so that he could take it all. When he took those guitars, he did a b-line for them. There were boxes of books knocked over and spilled all over the place on the path he'd had to take to get from the door to those guitars. My mother is delusional about these men. She doesn't believe it is him stealing, even though it is obvious that it is. She told me one time "last time me and Charles was up at that building, he showed me how he can just open the door without even having to use the key." Gee, I wonder when he figured that out. Anne that's exactly what I need in my life. I need someone with a talent for opening locked doors without using a key. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Part of the point of this is that I'm going to have to buy almost all of my books again. I paid a woman in India to make a list of all of the books I'd ever bought and how much I paid for them. That was back in 2020 when I was doing my bankruptcy. It has the book and the link and the price for each book. It will be easy to order them all again. I gave her my Amazon password and she went into my account and went over my order history, copying and pasting all of the items. I will have to do the same for the rest of my stuff, but because I've been poor and not able to read, I haven't bought nearly as many as usual. It won't be hard, but I'll probably pay someone to do it anyways. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"It has the book and the link and the price for each book."- valuing my property for my bankruptcy was easy, because 97% of my personal property was bought on Amazon. She got it all. For the books, I took the purchase price and multiplied it by .33. That's a good method to use for used books. The trustee had no problem with it. I think that, overall, the trustee was happy with me. Most of the pro se people struggle with the process way more than I did. I'd say pretty much all of them. It can make it tough on the trustee to get all the info that he needs. You have to reference laws when you exempt your property. That's one thing. Most people don't know much about laws. I am currently having a string of days where I'm impaired. I may be down for the count again today. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

This can be over, particularly for you. I get mad in these audios just a little. This is a hard situation for everyone to deal with. I am overcome with despair at the moment. My life is made very hard by what has happened. I am very broken and a ruined human being, in so many ways, but I can make the most of it. My soul has been murdered, over and over. I will never forget, but I can act as if I have forgotten. I'm not sure that I will ever forgive any of these people for what they've done to me. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

AI is so amazing. The new stuff came along at just about the right time for me. It came on when I couldn't do much without it. I wrote a programming script that formatted my training data. It was very easy to write, but ended up being an iterative process. I had to write extra scripts for some of my data. It was tedious. I just had ChatGPT format about 170 pages of training data. It took it about 60 seconds. Now I've got my model being trained on it. This stigmatization section has me doing it the long way. My traumatic stress reactions don't impair me from verbally describing what happened the way that they impair me from writing about them. I have recorded audio descriptions, and am going to transcribe them with AWS. I gave my custom language model a mountain of data. 170 pages is a lot. This is because I am lazy, as any rational human being should be. The more training data you provide, provided it is high quality and on topic, the more accurate the AI will be. Instead of manually correcting what is off, I may have ChatGPT infer what I'm saying from the context, and output me a corrected transcript. This can be over. I will have to get something that is fair to me. It will be doable. I get mad thinking about it, at times. But we can get on with everything else. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

If I get $30 million out of this + inflated fees for software/training, I will probably be the largest payout that the bank has ever issued to an individual. The $30 million will be what we put on paper, if that's the figure we go with. My idea for how to justify this, while having no adverse affect on the bank, will get us far. We will get this over with. I've got to get this thing done for my therapist. I am also very concerned about my SSDI case. If they don't continue my benefits on my review, it will be murder. I will lose it big time. I can't take anything else from life, especially not that. If I challenge them, it will be a 12 months or longer wait for a court hearing. That's what I assume. That will be a motivator until I get my disability documented. The key pieces there are the report that I am working with my therapist to prepare, also her notes that we already have, and my neurological stuff. Neurological stuff will cost some bucks. Got to raise that somehow. Most likely route is moms tax refund. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

It may be temporary. I like Twitter a lot. It is a place where people talk about things of substance. Fits me well, as I am opinionated and not much on small talk. I'm getting quite the audience. I can build up my website and get a following too, over time. But I am just a crushed human being. Such cruelty that I have been dealt. Whatever I'm going to do, ill be able to do it when this is over. If my social security review is not coming up, that's a good thing. I need longer to come up with the money, quite likely. I may ask DDS to get me a neurologist, if they review me before I am able to afford one. I'd have to look up the rules about that. One possibility that I think of, on your end, is that you are in some mindset that we can't do this. That settling will create too many problems. Like you're working out how to do it, and there is no way. I have had the impression before, that you are in that mindset. This was some months ago, if I recall. As batshit insane as it sounds, it may be the best thing to just tell the whole story to the public. That gets rid of the need to hide everything, that causes such effort and such stress. This is probably getting past exhausting for you. If I have to, I will make the announcement to the public. I have thought that I might do that since before October 2020. I'm good at explaining things and I'm a charismatic preacher. Or I can tell you how to explain it. Can't type more. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"It may be temporary"- part of what is going on is that there have been signs, for a while now, that you consider it very possible that this matter is in front of the public. This is whether I put it in the news or not. I don't like that idea. There is a lot about it that bothers me. It crosses my mind a lot, the pain that I will feel. It is probably best that I move to another country. Part of the problem is that you have opposed me, and if this oppositional stance is maintained if and when this makes it to the public, it will make things very bad. I have lost essentially every hope for privacy that I ever had, and this is particularly the case of this goes public. And still yet, I've told you things that next to no one knows, and you've invaded every millimeter of my existence. You have done this with absolutely no concern for my wellbeing for pretty much the entire time. It's like I've been burning alive this entire time, pleading in humiliation for water, and you douse me with gasoline instead. If you keep this demeanor, it will be crushing to me. A lot of my audios are such as to be protected from FOIA requests, as are some of the other things I've sent you, but you have had a tendency to dig in your heels and go on the offensive. We can have this be over, but I hate every single person who has anything to do with this. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"I hate every single person who has anything to do with this."- I just said this in the moment. I do hate almost everyone, but I would like to have a cordial relationship with the main people on the other end. As I typed that last email from a few ones to go, I knew that it's not making sense. Or maybe it did, but I seem to be giving incompatible scenarios. They're both accurate. I have went back and forth on this being in front of the public since January 2020. It is a nightmare and it was a necessary step then. It was also partially an act of desperation. When I mistook those received receipts, it started to be a little different. I had some positive feelings about being on the news. I'd narrate my thought process to them, about how it would be interesting and cool and then be terrible. I mostly viewed in terms of short term gain, for the sake of destroying my life in the long run. I can't type Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I had all these thoughts, but the main thing was knocking the hell out of this bank. Another huge motivator was being able to defend myself. I thought in terms of dying after that, constantly. As the time got near to getting the various agencies involved, I thought in terms of helping people. I pictured, at many times, me having a great experience with the federal reserve and the Justice Department. I pictured it being a cooperative effort, sometimes with me being a key player in the whole thing. It's like I'm always pulling things off. I can't remember if I told the LA Times signal line much about that. Most likely I did. For sure I told them about helping you. I can't remember if I included the other thing. But sometimes I'd picture myself answering questions on a podium, with people being outraged and taken aback, and possibly explaining it to the media. I'd picture me doing this with the people at the Justice Department in the background, maybe over to the side, thanking god that it wasn't them explaining that Wells Fargo had someone kidnapped and that we're going to keep the bank going for a brighter day. I'd picture them simultaneously being amazed at how easy and how fast this could be smoothed over. Like it would be painless and fast for you, when you'd been absolutely in hell over it. With smoothed over, I've got a way with words, in certain contexts. This is especially if I prepare in depth. A lot of this was extremely naive, obviously, but as I'm thinking of it right now, I do think it would have been quite possible to smooth every bit of it over. It's possibly that way now. I am running into some bumps. If I get $30 million for ptsd and claim it as a physical malady, the IRS will take me to court. My ptsd is a physical injury. I've already looked it up before, where big time experts say to consider it to be physical and not psychological. This is medical experts who also know about the tax code. But what happens to you is the IRS sees you as someone they might make a buck on, and they audit you and will likely try to compel you to consider it psychological and pay taxes. It is apparently a grey area that they can fight on, and my 8 figure payout will make me a target. The way to dodge an audit is to pay the maximum taxes on your money, whatever that is. I think it might be 40%, which absolutely sucks. I won't have nothing left. But I'll look it up and learn to live with it. Maybe it's only 25%, but 40% rings a bell. What I may do is pay more than I owe under the code. If it's 40%, I might pay 43%. That will keep the auditors at bay. ChatGPT says that I would still possibly be subject to audit, to determine if I am owed a refund, but that's just ChatGPT being fed IRS documentation. Real life humans know that they're not going to audit people with multimillion dollar tax liabilities that have been overpaid. In the extremely unlikely event that they do, it wouldn't go to court. I will get over this, hopefully. I really badly want to have this project done and to turn it in by the next appointment. I have next to no time left to do it and it's already taken me months. Part of what's got me in a crunch is that I don't get paid until the 14th next month. I get paid on the second Wednesday of every month. My meal shakes are $161 per 4 boxes, and I get 10 or 12 boxes a month. Sometimes I get more. They are usually charged around the 11th. so I'm having to pay for 2 deliveries out of last months check. I don't know what to do. I need to get my project done, and I need to get my neurologist stuff set up for social security, and I need to do something about this situation. I'm also having a little bit of trouble figuring you out, and I'm feeling amped up about you contacting more people and telling them that I'm "dangerous", a "psychopath", etc. My best take on you is that you're fighting on multiple fronts, and kind of confused too. I get a sense that you are anticipating some possibility that this turns out bad for you, and maybe you feel like you're running out of ways to deal with this. I also get a feeling that you think that settling this on terms like I've mentioned is going to be difficult or cause some huge problem or set of problems. It's like what you really are desperate for is for this situation to go away. You also seem to either a) have some goodwill towards me; or b) be being nice to make yourself look better if this is known to the public. In reference to item b, I do get the sense that there is some genuine good intent, as of recent times. In the longer term, the way you have acted seems to be influenced by a concern for how others will perceive you if your actions become publicly known. There is a way out of this. In re this concern about it not being doable, I've got a very good idea and I can do some analysis on this. And I Can't type. Need to make Audios Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I'm glad that it wasn't my friend in the UK that you told lies about me behind my back. I want so badly to help her. She is starting to lose faith. I don't know what your motive is, for doing all of this. I don't know if you're trying to put me in a position where I cannot negotiate with you or if you're trying to do something worse. I had a good streak there where things were looking better. It is possible to have concern for me, the very kindhearted man who came to you for help. I don't lie that I've got a little bit of a vicious streak in me, but it's a very small part of me. "I am a totally ruined human being"- you have no idea. I thought you might be helping me get a neurologist, but held out that it was a scam. That's obviously the case. All you know how to do is scam. You claim to the world that the facts favor you, as you are burying and hiding your actions and fabricating evidence and narratives nonstop. You don't make your claims to the world at once, you do it to one person at a time, behind my back. I've got so much to hide, according to your horseshit spiel, and yet I'm the one who has been trying for years to get this in front of the world. You're narrative is a photo negative of reality and every action that you take confirms that. The only facts that favor you are the falsehoods that you pay for. "I am a totally ruined human being"-this is what we're dealing with, and for no reason whatsoever. What is the fear of me getting a brain scan and an evaluation that shows real, actual results. I mean I am literally ruined, not fit to be around people, not capable of living a life, unable to take care of myself. But I mean what the fuck am I doing, thinking that you evil pathetic jackoffs give a shit. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Ok my new plan is to:1) Prepare some materials that will tank you, if released.2) sit on those materials and never do anything with them, as long as you don't go on the offensive again.3) as I'm sitting on them, I'm going to do some legal research, to find out how this works.4) after my research is complete, I will pull in a lawyer. I will have to find a good one who will work without taking too big a percentage of my payout. Part of the reason for item 3 is to make it easy for him/her. What I prepare in item 1 will help me get past the discrimination component. The weakness of my current materials is that it takes too long for the public to consume them. I can make stuff that gets the point across much faster. If you take over one more person, I'm going to suspect that you've told them I'm a "psychopath" or the boogeyman, and it is almost certainly going to kill me. If I find out that you're planning an additional massacre of me that will get me really amped up and also likely kill me. Expect fireworks, most likely planning my funeral, and a really bad day. I've also got to do this project for my therapist. Neurological treatment is also a priority. I didn't like the UNC person that I was referred to. I didn't really check her out. It is more like a bias that I think the ones who work at a practice are better experts. I was thinking of considering her because I might magically get treatment for free. Correct, in a situation where serious allegations, such as kidnapping related to Wells Fargo, become public, regulators would find it challenging to justify inaction for several reasons: ### 1. Public and Political Pressure Public knowledge of serious allegations typically leads to significant pressure from consumers, advocacy groups, and politicians for regulatory bodies to take action. Inaction in the face of serious accusations could lead to public outrage, loss of trust in the regulatory framework, and demands for accountability from those in charge. ### 2. Legal Obligations Regulatory agencies have legal obligations to oversee and enforce laws and regulations governing financial institutions. Allegations of criminal activities, especially those occurring within the context of existing regulatory agreements or negotiations, would likely trigger mandatory investigative and enforcement actions under the law. ### 3. Financial Stability Concerns While taking action against a major bank can have implications for financial stability, doing nothing in the face of serious misconduct could pose a greater risk. Inaction may erode public confidence in the financial system, potentially leading to bank runs or market instability if consumers and investors lose faith in the oversight capabilities of regulatory agencies. ### 4. Precedent Setting Failing to respond to serious allegations would set a concerning precedent that could undermine the regulatory framework's integrity. It could signal to other institutions that serious misconduct will not be met with significant consequences, potentially encouraging further wrongdoing. ### 5. International Repercussions In today's interconnected financial markets, inaction on serious allegations against a major bank like Wells Fargo could have international implications. It could affect the United States' standing in global financial regulatory frameworks and cooperation agreements, impacting cross-border financial activities and regulatory collaborations. ### 6. Institutional Integrity Regulatory bodies also have an institutional interest in taking action to maintain their integrity and the credibility of the regulatory framework. Demonstrating a commitment to enforcement is essential for upholding the rule of law within the financial sector. ### Conclusion Given these considerations, regulators would likely feel compelled to take some form of action to investigate the allegations and, if substantiated, enforce appropriate penalties or corrective measures. The nature and scope of these actions would depend on the findings of the investigations, but complete inaction would not be a viable or justifiable option. In re item 2 of the below. I can come up with something that will work for this. The rationale. I can do it without implicating the bank in any serious crimes. In a large corporation like Wells Fargo, the approval process for a significant settlement, especially one involving substantial financial sums paid to an individual, typically involves multiple layers of review and approval beyond just the CEO. Here's how the process might unfold and what auditors might expect:

1. Internal Approval Processes:
 - Executive Management: While the CEO plays a crucial role in major decisions, they often act based on recommendations from other senior executives, legal counsel, and financial officers. For significant financial decisions, including large settlements, the CEO might seek input from the Chief Financial Officer (CFO), General Counsel (head of legal), and possibly other relevant C-suite executives.
 - Board of Directors: For settlements of a particularly high magnitude or those that might have significant implications for the company, approval from the Board of Directors, or a specific committee of the board (such as an audit committee or risk committee), might be required. The board's role is to oversee the company's management and ensure that major decisions are in the best interest of the shareholders.
 - Legal and Compliance Departments: These departments would likely be involved in vetting the terms of the settlement, ensuring it complies with laws and regulatory requirements, and assessing any potential implications for the company.
2. Documentation and Justification:
 - Rationale Documentation: Auditors would expect to see comprehensive documentation of the rationale behind the settlement, including legal analysis, the potential cost of litigation, and an assessment of the financial and reputational risks of not settling.
 - Approval Process Records: Documentation of the approval process, including memos, meeting minutes, and internal communications, would be important to demonstrate that the settlement underwent proper scrutiny within the company.
 - Financial Impact Analysis: Detailed analysis of the financial impact of the settlement, including how it was accounted for in the financial statements, would be necessary. This might involve projections of the impact on the company's financial health and discussions on how to communicate the settlement to shareholders and the public.
3. Auditor and Regulatory Scrutiny:
 - Auditor Expectations: Auditors would review the settlement for its impact on the financial statements, ensuring it is properly recorded and disclosed according to accounting standards. They would be interested in the internal approval process to ensure the settlement was authorized at the appropriate levels within the company.
 - Regulatory Oversight: Depending on the nature of the settlement, regulatory bodies may also review the settlement, particularly if there are implications for regulatory compliance or if the settlement could affect the stability and integrity of the financial system.

In summary, while the CEO's approval is significant, settlements of a large scale typically involve a broader process of internal review and approval to ensure they align with the company's interests, comply with legal and regulatory standards, and are justifiable to shareholders. Proper documentation of this process is crucial for satisfying auditor and potentially regulatory inquiries. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Might be tomorrow. Part of the point is please call off all pending scams. You will understand my rationale. It will work. Part of what I'm saying in these is that I don't want any of this stuff to happen from that ChatGPT text, and I will do everything that I can to make sure that it doesn't. I had no idea what I was involved in, when I was fighting my fight and preparing my complaint. Honestly, even if I did, I still had no choice to fight but I would have went about my dealings with the justice department differently. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

There seems to be no way around the social security administration knowing about what has happened. You are the people who can pull the levers of things like that. We might need someone assigned to my case as a dedicated person we can trust. You seem to be wanting to work with me and that is a good thing. I don't think the bank cares about $30 million + $5 million a year, and we can justify it. My justification will work for that. We need to work together, not oppose one another. I think you will see what I'm saying with my justification. It leverages several elements of the situation. I need you to get me that settlement, if I can't afford all of the services involved. I am going to get a lawyer, but I will need a forensic analysis done and I may need other information. I am constrained by resources and if I can't come up with the cash to do an analysis, I need it from someone. My lawyer may pay for it. I need a forensic earnings capacity analysis, to come up with a figure. It is in your best interest to settle this with me, the way that I want, I think. And my lawyer won't pay for it, probably not, because I'm not going to settle on any terms other than my own. If I absolutely have to lower my offer, I just may. But I'm not going to settle for something that is too low, for the sake of my lawyer. I don't want him/her to have leverage over me like that. For your purposes, you may need this earnings capacity analysis prepared a certain way. Part of what we've got to do is present the evidence in a way that you can pass for your purposes. We've made up as we go along this entire time, for the bank's benefit. We can keep doing that. This thing where they cheat and expected me to play fair wasn't right at all. If we present the evidence as it is, it's not going to work for you. We've got to work together. And I'm realizing a tiny bit of a problem here, with the evidence. I'll figure that out later. Another thing is that if you've paid off every lawyer in North Carolina, you need to undo that. It's going to rev me up if I call a random lawyer and they're working for you. I'm hard to deal with, I know. This is a make up as you go along situation. There is no need to not work with me. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

It is something with my heart. It happens to me every time. I know for 100% fact that it is something with my heart. I am very weakened and somewhat close to dying. If I took some kind of poison, it would for sure kill me, because I'm close to the edge of death right now. Not that I want to do that or have any intention to. It is just a thought that crosses my mind and speaks to the condition that I am in, because normally it is very hard to die. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"I can tell that I'm close enough that all I need is something to push me that last little bit.- one more blow would do it. We need to call off all scams. One more in the short term, I don't know how on earth I could take it. I need to get ChatGPT to vet my rationale. After that is done, or maybe before, I will send you an audio to explain. Once I'm done with the audio and ChatGPT, I need you to call me and set up how we work this out. We need to document things a certain way, for your purposes. I'm also very concerned about my healthcare records and the snafu they create for you. I'm thinking you're not going to like having healthcare records that document a reason to crash the world being circulated, even if it's only among a handful of doctors. You have very big and significant interests, and this is a motivator for you. On the flip side, I need my medical records to be accurate, and to be accurate they will document my condition accurately and they will document that my reasons for thinking what I do are legit. I need to live in the little world that I live in, in a way that is business as usual for me. What we might have to do, if it works for you, is have someone in the Justice Department assigned to hover over my life. I don't want my privacy compromised, but if they need to explain the situation and keep it contained, that would be fine. I would prefer that it be someone high up, just because it is a serious thing and I need someone I can trust. We may also need to have someone specially assigned to my social security case. I am a liability for some people with big interests, and it may just be necessary for them to take over some aspects of my life. I don't like that, not exactly, but as long as I am afforded privacy in a general sense, I think I could deal with it. It does bother me how I'm a liability for everyone that I know. It is a pattern that has went on for my whole life and that never relented. But I'll deal with it, and it's better than having to manage this situation some other way. My life won't consist of all that much anyways. I have things I like to do and won't be around people much at all. I think I could overall be happy. Getting my medication upped has helped, and if my neurologist bumps it up again, I will be that much better off. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Part of this is that I have been confused the entire time. Or when I'm not confused, I am feeling confident, for some period of time, about an outcome that is totally in outer space. This is like me thinking that everyone had conceded that I was getting money out of this, and you were waiting for me to put it in the news so that I could get billions of dollars. This is nothing at all like how you think. But I have no idea what to do and why you're doing what you're doing for almost all of the time. I get anxious about dealing with you too. That's what happened after I proposed $20 million. I was intent on settling when I said that, but then I got worried about being scammed. It's like the money goes in my account and I think I'm good, but when the federal reserve "illegally" siphons it out of my account, as some kind of tactic, I'm going to complain to who? I thought about things along these lines. Then there have been times that I've thought you wouldn't consider giving me anything that is remotely fair. That had me thinking about the media at times. The way I work is I need to know what we're working with and how this works. When I know that, I can figure out how to get true most out of the situation for me, without compromising your necessities. It's like there's a deal to be cut, and there are certain limits, and that's what we work within. Sometimes we can get creative and extend the limits, but the functions the limits were in place for have to be kept intact. Like if the limit is "we can't possibly justify more than $x for this", it may be that we can find a way to justify more, if we think about it, but the constraint still exists that this has to be passable to the auditors. Being passable to the auditors, in this example, is the ultimate constraint. I'm a good investigator in contexts like this, but there are limits to what I'm good at. What my process needs to be is I turn over a complaint to the justice department, having good intentions, and the justice department tells me the process and how I get a resolution. I don't know the magic that you do behind the scenes or the mundane tasks or any of it. It's like you do this for a living, my territory is to turn you over a complaint, and your territory is to tell me what I have to do to get something out of this. If that second step is left up to me, we're going to be on the merry go round for years (and we have been). I'm shooting in the dark as a person who has no intuitive feel for things like this. Looking back, I think you had sort of benign intentions with everything that was going on with these hospitals, but then I threw a wrench in everything because I figure everything out and fight back. I'm a peculiar person and I live in my own little world. I possibly miss the big picture quite often, and I fight back as a reflex. It's like I feel like I'm under attack and I don't think about much past that. I am nearly dead. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I might get it to you today. I've also got to do my mothers taxes. I told you that if you upped my medication, I would do some research and work with you, and I want to make good on my promise. This can be over. There is a concern, probably, about the awareness I have created online. I tend to think we can explain this all away very easily. And in that last sentence, substitute "I" for we. "We" won't need to, most likely, because "I" can do it alone. Hopefully we have no public hoo rah created from the settlement, and I can quietly make my profile about something else. I've got a lot of topics and causes that I'm interested in. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

It will be hard for me to get a lawyer on my own. I tried a lot in 2019. I also tried some in 2020 and a little in 2021. It was mostly desperation in 2021, because of the condition I was in. Rightly or wrongly, I pictured it as a 100% probability that my lawyer is bought and works against me. It seemed like a pointless thing. I wanted to get my case in the media to put it in the spotlight. I thought that would make it harder for a pay off of my legal counsel to happen, if we even got that far. Then, in 2022 or 2023, I had a surefire way to get an attorney, and I found out something then. I found out that I am scared of the whole process, because in addition to my lawyer being bought, I feared more crimes. If I had an attorney make an offer to represent me in 2021, that would have come up then. I have said all kinds of horrible things about the Justice Department online. I have deleted most of it, but part of that is that I have a deficit in self-control. I have trouble censoring myself, and I have had no direction for most of this. It is just a haphazard process where I don't know what I'm supposed to do. I did have a consistent drive to get this in the news for a long time. But other than that, I just suffer and don't know what I'm supposed to do. If I had some kind of outcome, where someone told me "we're working on this. We just need to situation kept quiet while we figure this out" I would have been better able to inhibit myself. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

It seems to me that the best solution is for me to become part of the process of managing this situation. I have an interest in this and so do you, and we need to have a uniform direction and plan. As long as we're on two different pages, there will be friction in handling this and it will be messy and frustrating. I would really like for the Justice Department to help my friend on Twitter. This is particularly the case if we have to scale down my settlement amount. I don't think I'm being excessive at all, in estimating a $2 million cost for a private investigation. That will take a chunk out of me. I may be able to do the Justice Department some favors in the future too. I have some unique abilities. One that comes to mind is that I am extremely good at picking up on signs that people are guilty or not guilty of crimes they are accused of. I can do this based on very little information. I just need to see them talk about it. Sometimes I can spot signs of obvious guilt in a 45 seconds or less clip of the person talking. It wouldn't pass in court, not unless we did some kind of test that validated the accuracy of my ability, but I could give you a direction to go that you could bank on. I could tell you who is the right suspect to pursue. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"It will be hard for me to get a lawyer on my own."- I have figured out part of the problem here. I have a way of approaching this that will up my chances. There is also the option where I draft the terms and you agree to agree to those terms. If I have that, I can get a lawyer. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I have wasted an entire day doing her taxes. It was absolute murder figuring it out and doing the math. I couldn't concentrate to read the rules on the irs pdf and ChatGPT gave me garbage information over and over. ChatGPT told me the wrong thing from the get go. If I would have been given accurate information, I could have done this in no time. It is just clicking buttons to put in your filing status, load duplicate info from last year, and then tweak a handful of numbers. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I need you to think about me and to work this out in a way that works for me. I need you to work with me. I've got a good rationale that will pass. I told you that if I got my medication upped that I would research this to find a way that works for you. I have made good on my promise. My settlement amount might need to be lowered. If we have to do that, and there is no way out of doing it, that's fine. I have never been your enemy. My main concern was my life in Charlotte and I wanted to help you. That's from day 1, in march 2020. If on day 1 or on day 2, you told me that the way for me to get help would be to make this work for Wells Fargo, I would have done that. I was Wells Fargo's opponent because of what they had done to me and because of what they had done to others. I had promised people that I met online that I would help them get justice. You made me the enemy for no reason. It was a mistake and this is a very hard situation for you to deal with. You can backtrack. Everyone makes mistakes. We can get past all of the bad feelings and ill acts and ill spoken words. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I like developing software. I have done about 40 minutes worth of work today on my old client's redesigned website. It is mainly having ChatGPT do the work for me. What happens is I work for 30 minutes, and it then takes my brain an hour and a half to recover. When my brain gets taxed, it creates this feeling that feels like terrible distress and I can't do anything. My brain still hadn't recovered, and I just did another 5 or 10 minutes worth of work. It has massacred me and I have a feeling like I intensely want to die. My brain will eventually recover. I have been typing this message for a while, and I'm getting there. I've got enough brain power to ask ChatGPT one more question, I think. We need AI to come up with a way to address the climate crisis and ecological overshoot. I had a brief interview to discuss doing work for a company that helps people get loan modifications. I had sent them a message on their contact form offering to help on a trial basis. I told them I am an expert with behind the scenes experience and if they're not happy, they don't pay and we go our separate ways. That interview put it in my face, how completely unsuited for doing work for others that I am. The stress of knowing I had that interview tormented me for days. I was tempted to cancel it, for that reason, every single day. I wanted to alleviate my torment. It is also an endeavor for me to manage my life such that I can make an interview like that. It imposes great hardship on me that is not remotely sustainable. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I currently participate in a bunch of discussions about social issues, science, and things along those lines. If I offered subscriptions, it would be programming tutorials. And the secret to me getting stuff done is my medication. The higher my dose is the more that I can do. That has proven very true. Whatever is wrong with my brain, my Medication helps a lot. The neurologist I saw in 2018 told me that I am on a "high dose" but that he has seen "a hell of a lot higher." He also said that it was a safe medication, in terms of impacting cognitive abilities or causing brain damage. Said that it had been studied. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I've been kind of wrong in how I deal with this. I have a handicap in social situations, and this is a social situation. My behavior probably seems completely out there to you, and that's no accident, if that is the case. I am just being who I naturally am, and I don't know how to be much different than that. This is especially the case when I am all wound up. My deficit in self-control plays a role too. What I'm thinking is that I haven't been constructive or acknowledged the basic goodness of the people on the other end, at least not enough and not consistently. I need you to help me, and I have said mean things and talked to you and about you in the worst terms, as I have needed that. I don't know how else to be, because I just am that way. I don't have much ability to plan and to think about how to go about this, due to my handicap. Then my suffering hits me all of the time. It makes me that much more volatile and it makes it that much harder for me to censor what I say. This situation can be made into something good. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Sometimes I feel like I'm trying to crack the code, and there is no code to crack. You just want this situation to go away, and you really get amped up over it. I fight at this because I have no choice but to fight. I am a ruined human being and I am profoundly disabled. I can tell that this handicap will never go away. It is not something that is temporary. This thing where I paced the floors 15 hours a day, craving death, going into depersonalization, having intrusive memories that pounded me with the most horrific trauma, that was temporary mostly. Some of that remains, just not nowhere nearly as frequent and the highest levels of intensity are extremely rare, I think. I'm not sure if I have even a period of a 5 or 10 seconds that is as intense as the highest levels I reached and often stayed at, back then, in terms of shell shock and trauma and the rest of it. But this impairment, where I have this powerful inhibition that I describe in my letter to DDS, and the rest of it, it is continuous and always present and it is obvious to me that it is brain damage resulting from the repeated traumatic events in 2019. I had some sort of traumatic events after that, but the one that handicapped me was what happened in April, and then the ones that followed up had a compounding effect that obliterated me that much further. On those 3 traumatic events, I felt myself being injured on each occasion. There was a delay in feeling the full effects of April 2019. That one started to crush me in may, extremely badly. It was a horrible feeling. Then the other ones worked kind of the same, in that they set off a process that hit me at once and then worse symptoms set in at time went on, eventually becoming permanent. If you saw the reality of what has been done to me and the condition I am in, the only question left to answer is do you care about the consequences of your conduct and this bank's conduct on others? Your behavior adds up, in some possible interpretations of the facts, that you feel like the consequences of this banks conduct are someone else's problem. Whose problem is that? Well rule #1 is that the consequences of the bank's conduct absolutely cannot be the problem of the bank. To allow that to happen is, in practice, the ultimate crime. Rule #2 seems to be that it also absolutely cannot be the problem of the regulators and the authorities. Rules 1 and 2 mean that the consequences have nowhere else to fall but on the victims, who usually engaged with this bank in good faith, with good intentions, as I did. You do everything you can for them; then they literally are willing to murder you when you want something from them, even when they rightly owe you 10x or 50x what you are asking for. 50x is by far an understatement, when you look at the whole picture. I asked for a conversation and $0, after they destroyed my life and what I cared about most. But we don't have to do this. We can do things differently. We can make this something good for everyone. I have also, very frequently, I am sure, lost sight of or trivialized the cost of this on you. The authorities and the regulators have paid a price for what has happened. This has been hell on you and hell on the people at the bank. I wish it didn't happen every bit as much as you do. I wish I could magically be better, but it will never happen. they asked me to fill out a page of paperwork at the clinic the other day. I couldn't and I am sure it was obvious to the girl who watched me that something very bad is wrong with me. When I get these automatic hostile reactions, that is another time that it is obvious something is wrong with me. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I just bought two new books, and I can't hardly read them. This is part of what you have taken from me, and it is horrible. I always got such pleasure out of learning. Learning and developing skills have always been my favorite things to do. If I get a neurologist who will up my medication, I will be able to function much better. This whole thing is absolutely insane. The way to fix this is to have a solution that takes into account the asymmetry of me and the bank, and all that is at stake with the bank. Let me get you a link to my latest introduction video. I don't know if you have a utility to download my videos on X Platform. Here is the YouTube link: <https://youtu.be/e2KLJVA1rhw?si=O4EE7kd38tXIOUfc>. Here is a link that doesn't require a redirect: <https://m.youtube.com/watch?si=O4EE7kd38tXIOUfc&v=e2KLJVA1rhw&feature=youtu.be>. You may want to remove the si query string parameter and possibly the feature query string parameter. I speak of you in the worst terms in part of this. It is hard for me to get in the habit of having a constructive mindset, because I have spent much more time and invested much more thinking in a mindset where you're rotten, evil, corrupt, dishonest, and all of the things along these lines. Towards the end of the video, I shift into a more constructive mindset. That's where I want to be all of the time, but I have a lot of aggression, experiences of cruelty, injustices, and trauma responses tied to everything, and I get provoked in the moment. What I say at the end has some value. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I'm rethinking my approach to this. I need to make you some audios. I have been destroyed, as a human being, by what has occurred. I think the best thing is for you to make it public and let the truth come out. That would solve the whole problem. A big part of this for me is that you have told this garbage to god knows how many people. It is not true, not at all, and you have to know it by now. We need to procure this signal chat from the La Times. It's got a lot of entertainment value. I speak so highly of AU girl and how good you were at picking her. Then I start to fluctuate and be moody down the road from that. At one point I tell them "AU girl is a rotten human being, and a curse in a dying man's life." I am so weakened that someone blocking me on Twitter has me feeling like I'm about to die. When I get this thing, there is always a weak type of feeling concerning my heart. It's like I take a blow and I can feel it damn near kill me. A fight like this will eventually kill anyone. This thing about panic attacks is not accurate. I get so mad thinking about it, that I want to file a malpractice lawsuit on the next person who wings a diagnosis of panic attacks with being qualified and/or without doing an assessment. Not one time people have said this have I met the criteria for that diagnosis or come remotely close to meeting the criteria. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

This was a person who I valued a lot and who valued me. She has a lot of followers and is a medical doctor with a lot of expertise. I think that is why it hurts so bad. It is a horrible blow, somehow. I will not die as a result of this, but I'm close enough that it wouldn't take much else to at least give me a heart attack. My best guess is a heart attack. There is a clenching feeling in my heart when this happens. It has to do with my system being weak. When I was damn near dying in 2021, I had an intuition that taking an extra adderall would help me, and it did. I would repeatedly be about to go, and it reduced that by a lot. This was on one single day. I had taken 20 mg of zyprexa and it had weakened my already weak system. The next day, I toned it down to 5 mg or maybe 10. Seems like it was 5. There is something very different about my intuition and that of most other people. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

This thing with my intuition has to do with the below. It is the most vain thing conceivable, for someone to say this. That's what it feels like to me. But still yet, it is the plain truth. Go through the list of traits and find one that doesn't match me. I don't recall one, but maybe there is one or two. In any case, you will find more than a semblance of me in this. There is so much that resonates with me in this book, that cannot be faked by the author. One big one is this curiosity that creates a feeling of tension. seeing that was similar to when I saw on an autism test a question "I hate the sound of vacuum cleaners", or something like that. I have had a problem with vacuum cleaners my entire life. I always feel a sense of dread when I turn one on. It is something I had never told anyone, and that I never knew that anyone else experiences, and here is some random test online that has magically tapped my private thoughts, by its creator knowing a lot about autism. This book was the same with what it said. Another thing is this self-centeredness that I am so capable of. I can be given to the most extreme self-centeredness. I have put a lot of effort into being better, but it resonated with me very strongly. https://www.amazon.com/Hidden-Habits-Genius-Grit_Unlocking-Greatness/dp/0062892711/ref=sr_1_1?crid=1P9VS3JPZPH1U&dib=eyJ2IjojMSJ9.P-HRQKoHqkqtRZ2O7O4gKErUihP2HoTUhKB3HmZgHNvz6csXLuZnFUC0IJbvS16FLQZYbgXgEhWj0v3iVBh4VxY_nPT0Wwa0XQ_Yq-DLi1YMP09WJD41xUsPS8zoNCvL8XXApBMkuwVYQw1CGzjr9JhgGtNS-G-Rg6g879oSqmSOxDKa7eBwd2xNziA1RagX-19b89Xjvepx5GfvXMTcTlYygJ-BcE-Dg-TqjiCz0no.ssEjI0q_fx2IBtnN6TRLqUeKhg0fsHTAdBnc18UedDw&dib_tag=se&keywords=hidden+habits+of+genius&qid=1713582718&sr=1 Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"Here successful people and geniuses share a common trait: most are lifelong learning addicts. It's a good habit to have." I had forgotten about this one. I don't mean to be vain. That's not the point. It's just that I know who I am very well, and no one else does. But who do people listen to? Poor little Jenny had a pretty accurate sense. She got a big enough dose of me, and she's a good enough people reader. She told me one day "you like to have a puzzle to solve." At that point, I had never thought about it in those precise terms, but that's exactly it. I have a compulsion to solve puzzles. I help people because I care about people, but another factor is that I am good at cracking the code for almost anything, and I relish a good challenge, when I find one that suits me. My tendency to be self-centered at times has nothing to do with not caring about people. I care about everyone. I have a desire to help people and to make their lives better. I love it when people are happy, and making people happy is almost like a drug to me. It has more to do with this thing where I do not feel a strong need for people. I don't feel much a need for people at all. I cannot conceive at all, what it feels like to be lonely. I don't know where to start, in trying to imagine what that feels like. I don't think I'll ever be able to do it. It's like asking "what happened before the Big Bang." It confounds my intuition. My brain isn't designed to comprehend such things. In the same way, feeling lonely is for people who have a brain that came from a different factory than mine. On the other side, of not feeling a strong need for other people, I've got some other things. One is that I am given to having impossibly high standards. Then I am a tortured person who feels his own struggle and his own suffering very intensely. It's like I'm in a permanent crisis, in a way. I have a hard time not doing everything I can to ease my torment. I can't type any more. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

My little woman from the Philippines had a baby. I am very happy for her. I do not feel the least bit bitter, or sad for myself, or have any other feeling other than being happy for her. I worry about her and her family, a lot, due to the climate crisis. Less well off countries do not have nothing like the infrastructure that we have. All it would take would be one extreme weather event to really ruin her and her family's life. They have very limited means to recover.

I contacted this Metro guy on his X Platform timeline. You saw that I'm sure. I have wanted for a long time to show him that I am right. I had forgotten that he presents himself as a mortal enemy of yours. I am open to anything. If someone wanted to make a case that the FBI is an evil organization, I might be willing to hear it. If I weren't willing, it would have nothing to do with being committed to seeing things the way that I see them. If I were willing, I'd hear it until it becomes implausible. At some point you have to cut your losses. When people are wrong, it doesn't take you an infinite amount of time to figure it out. If it never did become implausible and the facts supported the case the person is making, I would accept it as true. As for my personal take, I think well of the FBI. I thought better of them in 2019 and 2020. I dreamed of the day that an agent came to help me with my case. I had such good evidence, and I thought to myself "these are people who are so good at this that they can smell when something is fishy from a mile away." I knew that a real pro and I would be on the same page. They never came to help me. It was a real disappointment, to understate it to an extreme. I have still seen some very compelling things that they have done for others, that give me a very good feeling about the FBI. I think our country is much better off because of them. I can't do my Kasina because my mother is here. It is taxing my mind enough that I can't do it. I am so incredibly sensitive to every little stress. Things that most people don't even realize are stress are completely overwhelming to me. Here is another example. I probably won't send you any more examples of this. I am preparing a document for my therapist, as this thing with my intuitions is a topic in a few of my therapy sessions, and will be a topic in future ones. Right now it is just a collection of screenshots from Twitter and my iPad. This is one that just happened today, right before I sent you the previous email. I looked at some statistics about gender dysphoria diagnoses in the U.S. many months ago. The data were taken from insurance companies. It as published online by Reuters. The Dutch Protocol people beat me to the punch, by about 10 or 20 years, in everything that I say. They do it unknown to me. Here they are using the core gender identity concept that I reference. I happened upon it on ChatGPT, and found it to match my concept of a neurologically based sex identity, in a way that I rather liked. I second their notion, absolutely, about autistic people. I have had one of them confuse the hell out of me. I've also had autistic legitimately dysphoric people who are extremely easy to figure out. "For example, it can be complicated to disentangle whether the gender dysphoria evolves from a general feeling of being just "different" or a whether a true "core" cross-gender identity exists in adolescents who suffer from an autistic spectrum disorder" Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Part of what has me amped up is being worried about you saying disparaging things about me. That's not all of it, but I can't get this worry to go away. I may post something about this on X Platform soon. If I do, please understand that it is just me trying to protect myself. What I need is relief from this fight. I need this fight to be over so that I no longer feel like I'm under threat and am being attacked. I also need it over so that I don't have to live in miserable circumstances. I need to stop being exposed to repeated humiliation by people who have done me wrong. I am going to try to build strength. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I am on and off feeling more resilient. It is amazing how many second winds I have. I'm on second wind #37,688 at this point. I need to make some audios. In about 4.5 to 5 hours, i will have the apartment to myself. I need to avoid getting on 3 hours worth of tangents. I need to take advantage of my uptime. You've been telling people I'm the boogeyman again, apparently. That's what is behind this last blip. I'm over it, sort of. You really need to stop doing that. You seem to have a preoccupation with me getting a lawyer and settling this. There is a chance I decide to do it your way. I have expected you to pay off my lawyer the entire time. That's been a hold up there. Also a fear of getting criminally victimized that came up in somewhat more recent times. I had a lawyer a while back that seemed like he wasn't going to reflexively discriminate against me. That's been the standard response. I may call him back. I may not die, but I have suffered continuous agony and been near death for years. You give the impression that you could watch this go on forever. I contacted the Justice Department, as a man who was burning alive with horrific suffering. The people who did this to me are sitting on oceans of water, and instead of making them give some water to me, you decided to douse me in gasoline, so that I could burn more and burn hotter, for their gratification. That's what I have felt like. That's what this has been like for me. You can do better. You have just made some terrible mistakes.Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I need you to join me in reality. What's taking place in reality is that you have watched a frame by frame, super slow mo, murder and death of a disabled man. I have been suffering right in front of you, horrifically, and all you can think about is protecting the bank from consequences for its own actions and gratifying the egos of the people at the bank. You have made a lot of terrible mistakes, but there is still a chance to not be a murderer. I have a deficit. I don't know how to talk differently to people who sit there and cruelly watch me suffer. There is nothing that is rocket science here. Stop terrorizing a disabled person and get a bank with $1,900,000,000,000 to write a check. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

If you think I'm hard to deal with, you should try having your life completely destroyed and screaming and crying for a year and a half to have a conversation + a one time payment of $0 and 0 cents, so that you could be kidnapped, made handicapped for life, have your city taken over and be terrorized for 1.5 years, then contact a bunch of depraved murderers who have a part time hobby of flattering themselves and a full time job of torturing disabled people to death. You have confused terrorizing me with defending your own actions. Terrorizing me is not a defense for previous crimes and terror attacks against me. I am so incredibly weak. Your way of going about this is causing things to turn out really badly. I am going to try to find a way to get strength but I am nearly dead. Any strength I do get is likely to be little and short lived, and I will most likely use it to defend myself from the things you have said about me, while I am still here to provide a defense. This is hell on you and I'm sorry, but I am only human and I have been treated so cruelly and I will end up being cruelly murdered if something doesn't change. This can be over if you do it my way but I'm not going to live much longer. Warmest
Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I moved to Charlotte to escape this, and I did escape it for a while. Life was so good. But did I escape it forever? How did that work out? Does any of this sound familiar to you? What would the chickenshits who cowardly use this despicable and dishonest tactic do, if it weren't available to them? Am I entitled to be mad, after having my life cruelly stolen, by people who could do no better than this?

6. In the mountains I was subjected to disparaging treatment and stigmatization because I have a history of hospitalization for mental health treatment. I lived in secret but terrible pain in this place, before moving to Charlotte N.C. in August 2011.

69. My distress was caused by vicious opposition I faced, and ruthless, behind the back attacks on my character. The opposition was everywhere and largely by people who smiled at me to my face. They had found a great tactic to aid them in their opposition. They would say disparaging things about my mental health history. I am not sure of all that was said, but I have reason to believe that it was things that were exaggerated to a cruel extreme.

I have had some terrible injury from this stress attack yesterday. If I eat anything solid, I am in terrible pain and unable to lay down without feeling like hell. It is pure torment and you need to stop terrorizing me. At this point, my best option is to get whatever I can get out of this and then go to Switzerland and die. The already unbearable hell my life is because of you has just gotten worse and I can't take it any more. I want to die very badly. If you're going to do it, do it right. Shoot me in the back of the head with a pistol while I'm asleep. That would be an excellent outcome for me and it would have been an excellent outcome for me in 2021, instead of making me live through unbearable hell watching my life be destroyed as I am helpless and under attack. Please Let's do this my way. You get me fixed today and I will get this done. It will work for you. This will be over. I do not care so much anymore. I just need enough to live for some time and then go to Switzerland and die. It will be a good outcome for me. I will be able to enjoy life for a few years or several years and then peacefully die. The bank can give me as much as they can justify without compromising their interests. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I am very sorry for the unkind things I said about your agency. This is a very difficult situation for me to deal with, as it is for you. You are a kindhearted and principled man, who takes great pride in his agency, and rightfully so. It was wrong for me to say those things.

Making Audios and it's killing me. I have my medication but am still temporarily impaired. My impairment appears to be at an excessive level, relative to typical times, due to my medication not being in my system in sufficient levels. My mother spent the money I was going to use to get a neurologist referral. I have someone whose company might buy a license to my database query package for a few hundred bucks or maybe more. If they want to, I will have to work on it a little to make it usable for a third party. The Duke neurology center will help me without any money upfront. I am pretty sure of that. I just need to get an MD to refer me. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Right now what I'm thinking about and sort of planning on doing is taking time away, to read research papers and books about gender medicine, and to make videos about the same. Also look at websites and do some other stuff. It is mainly pointless to tell you this, because I have so little self control and so little ability to act in any sort of planned, linear fashion. It seems to me that my self-control deficit might be more severe since this ptsd. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

These people mean well and they do not see the folly of their ways and it kills me. This stuff is pouring destruction all over innocent children's' lives. It is a tiny number of children getting plowed all over by the whole world. This is what happens when laypeople, who do not understand the complexity of medicine, try to take over people's healthcare. It is not "try to take over" in some places, it is just plain take over. I care about the condition of the world, and this trans people + gender dysphoria patients vs gender critical people + others has turned into something of just destruction. It is reckless harm.

I'm debating on what I want to do. I am working on my gender dysphoria projects. I also need to work on my social security case. I will be picking that up in the next couple of days. I wanted to wait to set it up with the attorney until I got my brain scan, but am sort of wanting to end this sooner. Money problems are killing me in re getting a brain scan. I just emailed them. I am going to ask for their advice. I really think that I need to get my medical care done so that I have my injury documented. I think they will agree. My plan for this is to get the absolute most that I can get without creating some issue on the bank's audit. I will ride it out as long as I can, on that money. I think I can have a pretty nice life for quite a while. I am horrified by the climate crisis, and I don't think I'll be able to survive on anything less than the numbers I have given you in any scenario. I'm speaking of $20 million + $3 million annually and the $30 million + $5 million. I will be keeping my eye on Switzerland as my money runs out and as things get harder. I don't want that country to go to shit as the result of repeated extreme weather events. It is the best place to live. I like the familiar United States of America for now. I fully expect you to pay off my lawyer, but I'm just going to pretend that you won't. If/when you do, you can be fair to me, I will be glad to have my own place + be able to enjoy life. I have thought that the thing to do might be to rent, instead of own, for as long as I live. If you spend a bunch of money on a house, you risk losing it all due to an extreme weather event. You can't lose too many houses in a row without depleting your funds excessively. I need my adderall upped more. I have had it upped several times, and I think I need it upped by another 50% to 100% of my current dosage. A competent neurologist will agree with me. I will keep you posted. They will probably get back to me tomorrow. I am getting a little antsy about the discussion/debate that we might have. If I have my brain scan, it will help the bank to better justify a larger payout. I am worried about the lawyer debating me on this. I don't need a lawyer, I just have to have one because I'm not licensed. I know this situation inside out. It's just the same as I didn't need a news reporter. I could have written the story myself. This guy comes across as nice, so maybe he will do things my way. I am glad that I get to talk to a lawyer in first person. These gatekeepers are a real problem. You are terrorists and the day is likely coming that you will be murderers. I will go into the ground as the man that I am, which is a far better fate than living in luxury, but at the cost of being people like you or people like the people at this bank. You look in the mirror and see a moral coward, who has no decency, no principles, and who has sold his or her soul. You see someone who has put effort into flattering yourself, but who has put no effort into conducting yourself in a way that flatterers you. I aspired to amount to something in moral terms, in my life. You aspire to have an easy day and an easy life. I seek to take the moral high ground in all that I do, even as I do sometimes fail. You are people who savor the ease that can be obtained by taking the lowest ground available. You like what your indecency can buy you. It is a great bargain for you, because you value ease in life and you place no value in having decency in the way you live. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Terrorizing me does not advance your cause. What would advance your cause would be to make it right with me, to compensate me and give me justice for the now over 5 years of nonstop terrorization I have been dealt. There are other means of engaging with the world, than terrorism. Tomorrows terrorism will never make todays terrorism justifiable. Today's terrorism doesn't not make yesterday's terrorism any more defensible. It just further solidifies your status as terrorists and liars. You have not made a millimeter's progress. Your actions are senseless and mercilessly cruel. It's another big fat joker, to add to your pile of big fat jokers. You will be searching for big fat jokers for the rest of your life. This is what I get, for fighting the most powerful criminals on earth, and contacting the most powerful criminals on earth, naively thinking they were anything like they said they were and would be willing to help me. I am hanging on by a thread and I am super weak. Progress is when you move further away from being a murderer, not when you relentlessly try to kill someone, by torturing and terrorizing them to death. This bank has got some cash. I am helpless and cannot take care of myself or work or fund my own life. Have them write me a check and then you and them get the fuck out of my life. Your endless quest to find one point in your favor has destroyed me. Bill Vanhoy is not a behavioral science expert. Forget that idea and forget every kooky scheme to make that narrative work. I am not a dangerous person. There never was a legal reason for Wells Fargo to obtain my healthcare records. That's another nonsense narrative. You have added heavily to this country's rap sheet and you have unjustly terrorized a kindhearted man, who wanted to help you. That's what you've done. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

This whole time I have needed the justice department to be someone who has integrity and who cares about what is right. That was the way for me to get justice. I have acted as if that is who you are, out of that need. I am now finding that it is pointless and has been a mistake to treat you as if you are someone that you are not. You are loathsome, indecent terrorists. You are liars and conmen. I will believe that you are someone different when you act as someone different. What I will tell you terrorists now is that this situation is headed towards a disastrous end. It will be a bad thing for Wells Fargo, if Wells Fargo becomes a murderer. For the sake of Wells Fargo, you may want to avoid Wells Fargo becoming a murderer. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

There needs to be something in this life, for me, for Wells Fargo's sake. You pile on more terrorism and more lies and more fraud, and it just snowballs. I have paid a nearly infinite price for this bank's conduct in any case, at this point. That's even if I am paid a settlement and even in the fantasy based scenario that these people are made to spend 1 day in jail per 1 federal crime in their crime spree. The below is a sample of the facts you have to contend with. You make it right with me and this will be over. You can turn over a new leaf and be someone different tomorrow. This is absolutely ridiculous. The takeaways from those healthcare records are: 1) Wells Fargo has broken the law again; 2) Wells Fargo is permitted to break the law by the Justice Department; 3) The Federal Reserve participates in Wells Fargo's crimes and other unlawful activities; and 4) the evidence of Wells Fargo's crimes, in the minds of Wells Fargo, the Justice Department, and the Federal Reserve, exists to serve the interests of Wells Fargo. In this, it shares the same function as: -crime, which exists to serve the interests of Wells Fargo -facilities intended for the most vulnerable people in Mecklenburg county, N.C., like the mental health facilities at Atrium Health, which also exist to serve the interests of Wells Fargo -state funds for the most poor and vulnerable people in North Carolina, which also exist to serve the interests of Wells Fargo -racist prison guards and serial child rapists, like the person both Wells Fargo and the Justice Department used to get information about me. Racist prison guards and serial child rapists exist to serve the interests of Wells Fargo, in the minds of all of the above -people who have been trying to cover-up and hide child sexual abuse for decades exist to serve the interests of Wells Fargo. Wells Fargo and the Justice Department will happily ally with someone who has that cause, and will aid them in discounting claims of child sexual abuse, if there is also a tit for tat benefit in serving Wells Fargo's interests. I do not discount the gravity of this situation and I can understand an ends justifies the means attitude. I recognize the limitations of all who are involved. It is still necessary to defend myself from any and all vicious lies they tell about me, and the filthiest load of bullshit their mind can conjure about me will never be as foul as the truth about what they have done, in service of terrorizing a disabled man who didn't do a thing to them. You are concerned about "dangerous people" like a handicapped man, who cannot take care of himself, and who you have terrorized for years, unless they are useful for you in your terror campaign against said handicapped man, in which case you ally yourself with a repeat child sex offender. I can't believe that I just had to say that. Your conduct is so foul that it bothers me for it to come out of my mouth. You will see how your story is not plausible. I'm not dangerous. Never was. All I know is how your agency has been to me. My question is- if you are different to other people, what is it about them that causes that? I offered to help you repeatedly, starting by offering 2 or 3 times in a single communication when I sent my revised complaint. What are the qualifications? What would work out in Wells Fargo's favor would be an outcome in which people could feel confident that, if Wells Fargo committed a crime against them, they could report that crime without being subjected to a years long campaign of terror and having their private medical information viewed by banking regulators. In your quest to make Wells Fargo look like it has done something right, when the actual situation is that it has done horrible, horrible, inexcusable wrongs, the lesson you are teaching people is don't do business with Wells Fargo. The way that it looks, there is no point and no reason for anyone to follow the law, in particular as it relates to this bank. You are impinging on my human rights (violating them actually) and my rights under the constitution. I'm going to be lawful anyways, but give me one reason that I should? Should I not have the right to defend myself against this terror attack? If I hacked their system and siphoned $50 million out of their cash account, you would have what basis to prosecute me, other than "the rules don't apply to them, but they apply to you" or "the rules exist to protect and enforce their interests, period, we are just not up front about that." You would probably be happy if I ended up dying, as long as you are not exposed. That's cold blooded and inhuman, but there is a rationality in it. I myself am a crime scene. I am evidence of your crimes, as long as I'm alive. There is something extraordinarily bad wrong with me, and it is because of the extraordinary damage this senseless crime spree has caused me. We could have settled this for a conversation 6.5 years ago. We could have solved this by Wells Fargo being running its business appropriately 7.5 to 8 years ago. We could have settled for pennies on the dollar at any time. You may get your wish. Your assumption, that I can handle an unlimited amount of cruel abuse, is based on bad physics. I keep telling you that you're going to kill me. It does nothing to stop you. It seems like an inevitable result, that you end up killing me. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

And I repeat- you will never dig yourself out of this hole you are in. If and when people see that this is what happens to them when they report Wells Fargo for a crime, they're not going to be wanting to do business with this bank. I have been modest in many of my settlement offers. It is easy to make an argument that they have all been modest, especially when you consider that dozens of people are getting a get out of jail free card, for serious crimes that could have them facing 10, 20, 40, or 50 years in prison. You coddle this bank. You design a process that is oriented around the gratification of the people at this bank. As you do that, you consider the victim less than human and terrorize him with demeaning abuse and crimes. Then you lie about the victim behind his back, to everyone you can. Then you terrorize the victim for literally years, as you break your neck to make the victim out to be the bad guy. You invade every millimeter of his existence, in your terror campaign, after he offered to help you over and over and over. Why would anyone want to deal with this? The way to make good on your wrongs is to make it right with the victim, not to continue to terrorize the victim. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

The only reason that we haven't already settled is that, shortly after I told you that we'd get this over with after I got my medication, I found out that you had told another person this boogeyman garbage. You have told so many people this crap. It is a big deal to me. It was within hours to a few days, after I got my medication, that I found that out. That's what had me second guessing. It's not like I'm going to get a fair process in any event. You're going to pay off any lawyer that I get. I was thinking you would have some interest in being fair to me and we could just do it your way. I could get a decent settlement and make it last as long as I could. I repeat- I can defend my life. This is even as I cannot defend some of my actions, as I have told you before. My life overall can be defended because of the consistent effort I have made to do what is right, because of my striving. You are not in possession, and never will be, of any novel information about my life. I am a miserly accountant when it comes to my conduct. This is all a distraction anyways. You say I am the boogeyman, which is a pathetic lie. Even if it were true, which it absolutely is not, what danger would I pose to anyone, as someone who is physically weak and severely disabled? The man in the wheelchair isn't the danger. Godzilla is the danger. Put those two side by side in your mind. See the contrast? See how foolish this is? Step 1, for you, I think, is for you to understand that you have committed crimes and could somewhat fairly be called criminals. In my view, it is not appropriate to call people criminals based on them having committed crimes. It is similar to calling someone a liar because they have told a limited number of lies. The word liar connotes a persistent feature of one's life and one's character, not individual incidents that take place in a broader context of being honest and ethical. It may be fair though, to call every single person on the other side a criminal, serious and dangerous criminals at that. I do not see any striving in you. I do not see a pattern of sustained effort to take the moral high ground. My personal pattern and long established trend of striving seems to be the polar opposite of how the people at the bank, who preside over these scams, go about life. What you have done is extremely immoral, in any interpretation of the events. It is brutally cruel and wrong. Your acts are acts of corruption and moral cowardice. Your acts expose you to a charge of hypocrisy. Your acts are those of a demon. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"I don't mean to make myself out to be better than you"- it is a fact that my life and the efforts I have made are more defensible than those of the people at the bank, who preside over these scams. Those people are obsessed with their own skin to an extreme I have never before witnessed. There is some humanity behind this, somewhere. You have a desire to do right. That is part of you, somewhere. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

Part of what you've got to understand is that I would prefer to settle this out of court, with as little visibility as is possible. That is just how I am. When you rev me up, I get in a mindset to fight back. I don't like how we have a double standard, where the bank runs scams and then we've got to do things according to the rules when it comes to me. I don't understand this situation. There is something you know that I do not. You've got to remember that I suffer from limitations and I live in my own world. Maybe that makes sense to you in retrospect. I tend to think that anyone who sees the big picture would not have went about this the way that I did, where I'm one person and the bank is one person and the authorities are going to see us as equals and take my side. It took me a very long time, a period of years, before it dawned on me how completely insane this is. I had to think about it a lot. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I was expecting national and international media coverage, highlighting what a badass investigator I am. That was what I would get as long as the justice department didn't decide to throw my complaint in the garbage and not deal with this situation. You see this as a major threat and a huge situation. In my mind, in the 2 or 3 months leading up to submitting my complaint, it was a toss up between this situation and a cup of coffee. That's what I thought I was up against. I've got to come across as more interesting than a cup of coffee. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I deleted this disparaging post about how everything serves Wells Fargo's interests. It kills me how I can't get a phone call. You could call me on a private number. I wouldn't record it. You would find this to be an extremely easy thing to deal with. You would be surprised at how easily this headache can be over. I am very easy to deal with. We could find something that works for everyone. A phone call would have done it 3.5 years ago. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

It would make me happy to get a good sized amount of money out of this and then have the claims about my character taken back or corrected. You have to realize that everything you do feels like malice to me. I do not see any remotely good intentions in any of it. I understand that you have huge interests and that a lot is at stake. I have blasted you over and over, and I can be very mean sometimes. The asymmetry between your interests and the self-contained life I have is a very significant aspect of this situation. I am defending my little life, which has an extremely small footprint, by fighting back at your gigantic interests. My lawyer will know more. I need to prepare some stuff for him. He for sure googled me. That's how he learned that I have a civil case. He only scheduled 30 minutes initially, and I think he is skeptical already. If he won't budge, I've got another attorney that might be willing to listen. If all else fails, I will give you their contact info and you can call them and tell them you need to run a scam. I have offered to help you with your scams for a very long time. I would have said, way back in 2020 or 2021, that my belief that all of this happened is a "paranoid delusion" and that I feel better now. I was in an extremely constructive mindset. I wanted to help the Justice Department any way that I could. I started to figure out that this was a really hard thing for you. I will still be defending myself online, now that you're once again on the offensive. I really wish I could just drop this whole thing. I am so worn down and I have things that I like to do. Tending to this is terrible. Here is a P.S., I am proud of my life overall. I am proud of the effort that I have made. I have a powerful story to tell, of my struggle with what it means to be a human being. I am just about as kindhearted as it is possible to be. I have never seen such kindness in someone's heart, as there is in mine. This is excepting my maternal grandfather and my mother. That is where my kind heart came from. I have privately speculated, in my own mind, that we may have some kind of genetic disorder that causes the part of our brains responsible for empathy to overdevelop. It is like I am some kind of mutant variety of kindheartedness. I will go toe to toe with anyone, concerning my conduct, my life, my character, and my kind heart. When you try to take shots at me or to back me into a corner that is smaller and smaller, from which I seem to have no escape, you do not intimidate me. You often hurt me very badly, but you do not intimidate me. You provoke me to fight back, with everything that I have. I have absolutely zero doubt that I will win. That's my mindset. I will fight you to the death. I will win, and then just maybe I die from the pain you have caused me after the fact. Trying to intimidate me provokes me. You are dealing with someone who is very different, and you have figured that out by now. You actually figured that out a really long time ago. I am extremely peculiar and I have a quality in which I have to have things a certain way. I am very much set in my ways. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I am like a Rottweiler. That is a good way to think of me. I live in my own little world, and I viciously fight back when provoked. There is another thing that comes into play, that certainly has to do with my being autistic. I get preoccupied with stuff. The people I worked with in 2014 to 2016 may recall when my car was broken into. I was on the case, doing an investigation and mad as hell. It gave the appearance to others, that my interest in it was excessive and irrational. I remember one person saying "I would never, ever steal from Clint." It's like they don't want to be on the other end of my irrational and excessive aggression. It is just who I am, all of these qualities. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I also have an idea for a podcast transcription service they could do. You have never tried being kind to me. You need to incorporate the poetic demonizing words that climate activists use, in your boogeyman based propaganda campaign against me. Here is one I just saw: "Be in no doubt: we are all being railroaded towards a climate cliff by a criminally insane death cult" This was in reference to the U.S. and the U.K., more generally to neoliberal capitalism. But it would make a good one "Bill Vanhoy determined that there was something off with this guy. He and several junior credit analysts started to see signs that Leonard is dangerous. We speculated that he may be a member of a criminally insane death cult. He fits the profile that we constructed." Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I like neoliberal capitalism. I hate the thought of a dystopian hell with no ChatGPT. I'm down for whatever. It is a moral issue, climate change. I want to do what is right. I really would be extremely happy if AI came up with a magic fix. I also have hope in Bill Gates. I most often feel, however, that civilization is doomed. I see us as collapsing progressively, with the only big question to be answered is how fast. Will it take 100 more years, or will we send the end of industrial civilization in 10 years? It is absolutely horrifying. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

With this peculiar way of being I have, where I have to have things a certain way, people have most often found that the easy way is to do things my way. It is partly due to me having a very clear and strong sense of what is fair. Then there are all my peculiar ways and how intense that I am. I have had some recent downloads of my materials on my website, and I think that some of them are this law firm. I despise this situation. I hate dealing with it. One surefire way to not have things be a nightmare, from your perspective, is to go along with what I say and follow my lead. I did not choose to be this way. It is just how I am. You have also met few people who suffer the way that I do. Probably none. I have been a tortured person, on and off, for my entire life. What has happened here has amplified that to an extreme, or, perhaps more accurately, caused the suffering that I live in to take on a whole new character. "Will it take 100 more years, or will we send the end of industrial civilization in 10 years? It is absolutely horrifying."- it won't be gone in 10 years, I don't think. I do think it is possible that the writing will be on the wall in that timeframe, such that no one who is sane can deny what we have coming. It will be a rapidly developing state of chaos. That's what we have for certain, in some time frame, if things don't change. I want to build a model of the earth's systems and the economy. If I build a model that captures every small detail of how this system works, I believe it is possible, and somewhat likely, that in the process I will discover some way to address the breakdown. There has to be something in there, somewhere, that we can use to artificially create a feedback loop. Have some runaway process in which heat is absorbed and not reflected back into the atmosphere, for example, or have heat taken out of the oceans in some way. I am getting so sick of this fight. What I want to do is work on my gender dysphoria projects. Today, I'm in the mood to start building my app to do an analysis on Reddit posts. All I would have to do is copy the class files from my Facebook project onto a new app and then modify them to work on Reddit. Instead, I'll end up doing something for this. It is occurring to me, that if I'm this sick of this shit, you are way sick of it. It has been my favorite thing to talk about, at any hour of the day or night, for over 5 years, minus a tiny number of weeks or maybe months. You've got to be to the point that you are about to vomit every time you think of it. I'll still fight you to the death, as if this is the only thing that ever has or ever will matter. We need to have a constructive tone and get a constructive outcome. This thing where I will fight is just who I am. I find it hard to betray who I am, even when it would seem to be in my rational self-interest. Let's get this over with. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

My meeting with the attorney is on the 13th. I am expecting skepticism. Someone has downloaded sec docs from somewhere. He's only wanting 30 minutes too. That is kind of a bad sign, or maybe it isn't. I have never had a consultation like this with an attorney. You really hurt me when you say these horrible things about me. The way you build up your case has two effects that are counterproductive to settling this. This is excepting the certain outcome that any lawyer I get is paid off. One is it revs me up to fight back harder. The other is that it makes me think you're trying to get out of this for as little as is possible. I am a massive liability for you, and what I would like to hear is "they want to get you something that is fair to you and to also settle this quietly. They will retract and correct the negative things that they have said about you." It would seem to me that the best thing for you would be to avoid this being known to the public at just about any cost. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

I will be very happy to get this over with, as long as I get a decent settlement amount. I want my own place so badly. Also on my list is to get with a neurologist and get my adderall upped. I've got another letter to the OIG that I'm working on. It's kind of abrasive but I'm going to finish it and send it to him anyways. Getting my adderall upped is the secret. It helps my impairment a lot. I can't justify it based on psychiatric illness alone, getting it way upped. A neurologist will agree with me though. I am sort of on the fence about if I want to get a brain scan first or if I want to just get this over with. My attorney will know. Part of me is hoping that you want to settle this, that you have a real desire to help me as long as you can dodge this liability, and that you have already paid off my lawyer in advance. Then I can call him and he will magically know the parameters of the situation. What works best for me is someone who can say "here is what we are dealing with. This is what we need. This is what we can't have. This is what we have to work with" and then let me decide and also exercise my creativity in coming up with the best thing. If you had called me with such a proposal at any time, since March 2020, this would have been over at that time + 3 days or a couple of weeks at most. The Justice Department people are a little mysterious. You are like inhuman monsters to me, but you have the clear and obvious appearance of being principled people who have a heart when I see you on Twitter and YouTube. If that latter part of you has any effect, I would feel confident that I get something fair. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

You're obviously going to do whatever you decide to do, but if you want my advice, try not to do anything to rev me up in the next 9 days. There is no such thing as intimidating me. You just trigger me to up the ante and fight back harder. Every last thing you have done has done that, at least as I can recall. I don't leave the kitchen. Nobody ever scares me out of the kitchen. I just keep turning up the heat until one of us dies. I will scream and cry as my skin cracks and pops and as I am burning alive. I am only human and I am also quite a sensitive person. It is just not my nature to back down from anyone. And actually put it longer than 9 days. Just don't rev me up until this is over. I'm going to have to have several meetings with this attorney. Your worst outcome is for the public to become aware of your actions. I like to stay out of the spotlight too. We can work this out. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]

"It is just not my nature to back down from anyone."- not in a situation like this. You are hitting me with repeated, demeaning criminal abuse. You are also taking shots at my conduct, which I put such effort into. You are behind the back character assassinating me, which has been the scourge of my life. We are on the home stretch. I am so sick of working on this. My appt with my attorney is in 7 days. If we could have this settled quietly within 2 weeks, that would be great for me. I am going through a period of lower symptoms. These come randomly, and they are so nice. I have a lot of ideas for projects to do. I have a lot of interests. If we settle this quietly and there are things left to address, I will help you. I'm speaking of helping you explain what has happened or make some notes on X Platform or YouTube to help your cause. I have caused some noise with my online campaign. I may end up causing a tiny bit more by the time it is said and done. People just scroll on by me for the most part. I think this might be the attorney. I also have some downloads from my other distribution, of my complaint. One of those might be him. All of these SEC files are flesh and blood people. It is possible some of the downloads of my complaint were not, but pretty much 100% certain at least one was.

I am watching my programming instructional videos. I bought a collection of 67 videos with my backpay money. It is extremely enjoyable. If I am going to build a model of the earth's systems, I am not sure how I will be able to do it. I would have to learn a lot of physics. I would have to buy physics textbooks. The way you learn something like that is by doing the problems by hand. If you're not familiar with how higher level physics classes go, the main piece is hard math problems. It is word problems. You have to read the problem to figure out how to set up your equation. There is no other way to learn that I'm aware of, other than to get a piece of paper and do it by hand. I cannot write with a pencil and paper, at least not easily. It causes me to feel extremely distressed and it fries my brain fast. My project to build a model of the earth's systems + the economy sounds overly ambitious, by a factor of about 20 or maybe 50. I will still try. I think I will be able to figure it out. Our civilization is going to progressively collapse. We are really in for it if we don't do something about the climate crisis. That will bring huge devastation in the short term. No matter what we do, it will be extremely helpful to have a complete model. Warmest Regards, Clint Williams (980)-[REDACTED]
